FURTHER R. A. F. ACTIVITY

Daylight Attacks On Nazi Concentrations

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—An Air Ministry communique states:

"Yesterday R.A.F. bombers made daylight attacks on concentrations of enemy barges on Dutch canals at Zwille, Haten and West, and also near Elbers and Deef. Many of the barges were sunk, wrecked or set on fire."

"Other aircraft bombed an enemy supply ship in the Danish harbour of Salberg."

"Our bombers also attacked aerodromes in enemy occupied territory, at Soles and Boust. Aircraft, personnel and transport were damaged."

Patrol Ships Bombed

"Aircraft of the Coastal Command attacked and damaged enemy patrol vessels off the Danish coast. All our aircraft returned safely."

"Last night R.A.F. bombers attacked naval bases at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, where damage was done to dockyards and an enemy warship was set on fire."

"Further damage was done to oil refineries at Hamburg and a goods yard at Hamm."

"Aerodromes at Waaheaven, Amsterdam and Brussels were also bombed. One of our aircraft is missing."

Bergen Raided

"This morning a formation of our bombers attacked Bergen, where an ammunition dump was set on fire and damage was done to a ship and a seaplane slipway."

"Another formation of R.A.F. bombers attacked aircraft lined up on the Sola aerodrome at Stavanger. The attack was pressed home in the face of strong opposition from enemy fighters and ground defences. One enemy fighter was shot down."

"Seven of our aircraft failed to return."

Danish Coast Attacks

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Enemy shipping off the Danish coast was attacked by Coastal Command aircraft to-day, states the Air Ministry news service.

Two large minesweepers were trying to clear a part of the minefield when a patrolling Hudson bomber bombed the leading mine-sweeper. The explosion lifted the vessel's bows.

Another Hudson followed up a dive-bombing attack on an enemy supply ship with machine-gun fire and the ship was seen settling down by the stern.

Channel Is. Abandonment

Government's Action Defended

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Viscount Simon replied to criticisms regarding the evacuation of the Channel Islands in the House of Lords to-day.

Lord Simon said that "this lamentable and distressing event" was a totally isolated case due to the geographical position of the islands close to the shores of France. It did not form any sort of precedent for any part of the United Kingdom.

The Government had no intention of abandoning any fortified position in any of the Dominions of the United Kingdom.

The officials of Jersey and Guernsey were continuing to carry on the best of their power in the civil administration, for which they were responsible.

If, by withdrawing from the islands, the small garrisons there were freed from a terrible and continuous air bombardment, it would be a small compensation for the loss and distress they felt at the temporary separation from their homes.

"I trust the day is not far distant when we may have among our triumphs the supreme satisfaction of seeing that the good people are returned to their homes," said Lord Simon.

ITALIANS LOSE SUPPLIES

CAIRO, July 9 (Reuter).—To-night's war communique states: "In the Western Desert, successful engagements continue on enemy columns trying to take stores and water into the fort of Capuzzo, causing a daily drain on the enemy's resources, particularly mechanical transport."

"On other fronts there is nothing to report."

JAPANESE CLAIM 'UNFRIENDLY ACT' BY BRITISH SHIP

SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"

SHANGHAI, July 9

(UP).—Quickly following the seizure of the B. & S. steamer Hsengking by Japanese Marines, the Japanese naval authorities last night lodged a protest with the British naval authorities in Shanghai.

The Japanese claimed that the Hsengking carried 627 cases of ammunition within the Woosung military zone where, they claimed, ships are not permitted to transport munitions for belligerents.

Japanese naval officials told Japanese newspapers that the Hsengking was ordered to halt by a Japanese patrol vessel, which subsequently fired a blank shell.

The Hsengking proceeded to the Hongkew wharf, where she was boarded by the Japanese.

"The Hsengking's failure to halt and submit to search is an unfriendly act," Japanese naval authorities subsequently said.

"An earlier report from Shanghai stated that the Hsengking was conveying ammunition from Tientsin to the British garrison in Shanghai."

Anti-British Movement

SHANGHAI, July 10 (Reuter).—An anti-British movement is becoming active in the International Settlement and in the French Concession.

An organisation describing itself as "Eradicate the British League" has issued circulars addressed to British troops, "telling" them to withdraw from Chinese territory at the earliest possible moment.

The circular adds that hesitation "may compel us to resort to force to effect your expulsion."

Manifested Cargo

SHANGHAI, July 9 (Reuter).—The British steamer, Hsengking, with ammunition from the French Concession at Tientsin for the French Concession in Shanghai, is detained at Woosung by the Japanese.

The Japanese announce that they are filing a very strong protest, claiming that the action contradicts the spirit of the Japanese representations concerning the withdrawal of belligerent armed forces from occupied areas.

However, the owners say that the matter is in order as the ammunition appeared in the manifest and the ship cleared the Japanese authorities at Tientsin.

Appeal For U.S. Help

Herbert Morrison Broadcasts

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Broadcasting to Americans to-night, Mr. Herbert Morrison, the Minister of Supply, said:

"Our confidence in our ability, not merely to hold off a Nazi attack, but ultimately to master it, is partly the measure of our confidence in America's readiness to add her great resources to our own for the destruction of that which menaces her no less surely."

"We Are Inspired"

"We are inspired by the sight of America awake and preparing."

"Against the material strength of the European continent organised for aggression, there is only one sure industrial counterpoise, and that is to be founded on the capacity of Britain and the United States."

"And we must do all our resources and our methods."

"We in Britain believe in our power to stand off and beat back the menace that hangs over us."

New Manoeuvre By Axis Powers?

BUDAPEST, July 9 (Reuter).—It is understood that Count Teleki and Count Cseky will attend the meeting of the Reichstag on Thursday.

It is reported that Count Ciano will also be present.

THE DUKE OF WINDSOR

Duke Of Windsor Becomes Colonial Governor

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—For the first time in the history of the British Empire a member of the Royal Family is to become the Governor of a Colony.

The Colonial Office announced to-day that His Majesty the King had been pleased to appoint his brother, His Royal Highness the Duke of Windsor, as Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Bahamas in British West Indies.

The present Governor is the Hon. Sir Charles Farguharson Dundas.

The Bahamas lie in close proximity to the coast of Florida in the United States, and the group consists of about twenty inhabited islands and an immense number of islets, comprising an area of about 4,375 square miles. The capital is Nassau, a famous resort for American tourists.

The Government is vested in a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of nine members, a nominated Legislative Council of 9 members and an elective Representative Assembly of 29 members.

RELATIONS WITH FRENCH INDO-CHINA

Chinese Report Of Battle Not True

The report in the Chungking "Hsin Shu Pao" to the effect that British and French warships clashed at Kwangchowwan on Sunday is believed to be without foundation.

An official denial is expected to be issued later to-day.

Relations between the British and French naval authorities in the Far East are believed to be completely harmonious.

Although no direct or official information is available it is believed, on the basis of reports from travellers, that the French Indo-China authorities have decided to work in conjunction with Britain in the prosecution of the war.

It will be recalled that the Petain Government recently recalled the military governor of Indo China and replaced him with Vice-Admiral Decoux, Commander-in-Chief of the French Squadron. Whether Vice-Admiral Decoux has assumed his new post is not known.

Shipping and air lines are now functioning normally between Hongkong and French Indo-China ports. Air France service between Hongkong, Indo China and Iran has resumed, and Imperial Airways have resumed between Hongkong and Bangkok, via Indo China.

These facts would seem to indicate that the situation is entirely normal.

FRENCH PUPPETS START THEIR ACT

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—According to the German official news agency, the French Parliamentary session was opened by M. Herriot, Speaker of the Chamber of Deputies.

M. Paul Reynaud, the former premier, was present with his head bandaged as the result of his recent motor accident.

STOCK EXCHANGE REPORT

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—On the Stock Exchange to-day, gilt-edged holdings improved but closed below the best owing to quietness of trading.

Industrial shares were narrowly irregular. Copper holdings were exceptionally steady.

Wall Street was steady.

Mobilising Resources

India To Make Full War Effort

SIMLA, July 9 (Reuter).—Steps are taken to mobilise India's resources for an unparalleled military effort, declared the Senior Staff Officer of the Indian Army, broadcasting to-day on India's war efforts.

Previous planning, he added, in the production of ordnance and supplementary supply had been brought to such a high level, that almost from the outset of the war India had provided not only the existing military forces with ample quantities of ammunition, light armament and equipment, but had also supplied enormous amounts of these items to Allied forces overseas.

Personnel increase. Furthermore, a beginning was made in the production of numerous military requirements not previously manufactured in India, including armoured plating.

The personnel of the Royal Indian Navy had been increased by nearly 200 per cent. Training establishments continued to expand rapidly.

Regarding the Indian Army, although thousands had been sent overseas, the adequately equipped strength was now greater than at the outbreak of war apart from the recently-announced expansion, involving initial increases of 100,000 men and a 20-fold increase in the number of Indian officers compared with pre-war conditions.

Board Of Trade Imposes Ban

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—The Board of Trade has prohibited all exports to Algeria, Tunisia and the French zone in Morocco.

The order is being enforced immediately.

MEN WHO LED TO DOWNFALL OF FRANCE

FIFTH COLUMN traitors were primarily responsible for the downfall of France. They quickly found response from many French leaders who have secretly nurtured the hope of seizing power and turning one of the world's leading democracies into a totalitarian state. The photograph above shows a group of Fifth Columnists being rounded up by French soldiers.

BRITAIN SPENDS £7,500,000 A DAY ON WAR

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—In the House of Commons to-day, Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, moved a vote of credit of £1,000,000,000 for war expenditure.

ITALIAN THREATS

Gayda Still Riding The High Horse

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—The breakdown of the Franco-British Alliance can make no difference to Italian and German claims on France, declares the "Giornale d'Italia."

"The breakdown cannot modify the conditions that France created with regard to the Axis powers by her past policy and military action."

"The conquered nation remains as such with her political debts to Italy and Germany, and the changing of responsibilities of France, which will have to satisfy Italian and German demands," says the paper.

GALLANT PILOTS

New Awards Made To R.A.F. Heroes

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—An R.A.F. award list of 73 includes one recipient of the Distinguished Service Order, since reported killed in action, 26 Distinguished Flying Crosses at which one is since dead and one re-elected missing, and 21 Distinguished Flying Medals of which one has since been reported missing.

Flow At 500 Feet

One officer decorated succeeded in making a detailed reconnaissance of an objective from 500 feet, enabling him subsequently to bomb the most vital part of the target accurately and with devastating results.

Another officer led the first leaflet raid over Germany at the beginning of the war and since has been a splendid example of courage and determination.

A sergeant is decorated for locating and bombing a railway siding and trucks with 12 250-pound bombs from 600 feet. From the violent explosion that followed it was evident that the ammunition train was destroyed.

ALIENS IN MALAYA

Questions For The House Of Lords

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—In the House of Lords to-morrow, Lord Marchwood, formerly Sir George Penny, will ask the Government whether they will follow the action of the Straits Government with regard to enemy aliens.

Government's Decision

Lord Marchwood said that the Straits Government, while realising that distress and inconvenience may possibly be caused to a certain number of innocent persons, have decided to intern all enemy aliens as they are not prepared to take any unnecessary risk in the present state of world affairs.

Whether, if for any reason the British Government consider it undesirable to intern them in Britain, they will take steps as soon as possible to arrest and ship them to wherever they will constitute the least danger to the State.

Registration Ordinance

British Subjects In Colony Supply Details

About 1,500 more British subjects in the Colony registered yesterday at the Supreme Court when registration of the latest category, announced at the week-end, opened.

The registration will be continued until the names of all British women and children and men over the age of 55, except those of Chinese race, have been recorded.

Many without passports were turned away yesterday, and were advised to apply for either a passport or an emergency certificate at the Passport Office, Chung Tin Building.

Forms were given to those who attended, to fill up, and on these were entered details as to age, nationality, and in the case of women, husband's occupation. There was a large crowd at the registration office during the busier hours, but adequate arrangements had been made so as to avoid delay, and hardly any people had to wait more than a few minutes, officials explaining what had to be done where there was any uncertainty.

Later in the day, it was announced that another registration office, available for Kowloon residents, had been opened at the Travel Bureau at Tsimshitsui.

"Comment which has appeared in the Press regarding the recent amendment to the Registration of Persons Ordinance has led to some misunderstanding.

"The principal object of the measure is to obtain information on which plans for the evacuation of women and children can be based; but the opportunity has also been taken to obtain a complete register of British subjects, including men over 55 years of age.
"There is no suggestion of the compulsory evacuation of men, and a certain number of women, including those registered as nurses, will be given exemption, either permanent or temporary."

TALKS IN BERLIN

Hungarian Ministers To Join Ciano

Budapest, July 9.
The Prime Minister, Count Teleki, and the Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, will fly to Berlin this afternoon to join the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, in his talks with the Nazi leaders. The visit is believed to be the outcome of the tension of the past 10 days.

It is believed that last week's diplomatic activity has already led to a formula concerning their difference for acceptance by Rumania and Hungary and that the present visit to Berlin is only to settle the details.

It is expected that the Berlin meeting will result in the handing over of some border territory as a preliminary to further negotiations; also that it will fix a formula for arbitration by the Axis Powers if and when direct negotiations with Rumania break down.—United Press.

Maginot Line Tour

Berlin, July 9.
It is reliably stated that Count Teleki and Count Ciano will arrive in Berlin to-morrow. They are expected to make a tour of the Maginot Line and then to return to Berlin to participate in talks on Hungary's revisionist claims.—United Press.

Rumanian Withdrawal

Rome, July 9.
Authoritative sources declared:—"Budapest considers the Hungarian Rumanian question still open, though that does not affect Hungary's intention to maintain her attitude of non-belligerence."

It is reported from Budapest that the Rumanians have withdrawn their frontier forces 50 kilometres inland to a line corresponding with the Rumanian-Bulgarian frontier in Dobruja from 1935 to 1937.—United Press.

Speculation Over Russia

Budapest, July 9.
The increased Russian activity in South-east Europe, simultaneously with the Berlin meeting, dominated speculation in Budapest to-day, rumours of Russian activity against Turkey or Iran raising the question of whether the Russians might be planning a change of designs, with possibly, a return to the Rumanian question after a showdown with Turkey.

Observers in the Near East are unable to confirm reports of Russian troop concentrations on the Persian frontier, whence their forces were withdrawn for action in Bessarabia.—United Press.

HSENGKING SEIZED

Japanese Hold B. And S. Ship In Shanghai

Shanghai, July 9.
The Japanese navy seized the China Navigation Company's steamer Hsengking on its arrival to-day from Tientsin, from where it had brought munitions for the Shanghai garrison.

British naval authorities said they were investigating the seizure and denied the reports that the Japanese flagship Idzumo, which made the capture, had machine-gunned the vessel.—United Press.

JAPAN HOSTILE

Press Comments On British Reply

Tokyo, July 9.
The Japanese press regards the British reply to the Burma note as a pointblank rejection of the Japanese demand, but expects Britain will reconsider the matter in response to Mr. Arita's request.

Pointing out Japan's firm determination to cut the supply routes to Chungking, the Nishiichi predicts that if Britain fails to respond to Mr. Arita's request Japan will be compelled to take effective and appropriate measures to suspend the traffic and that Britain will be responsible for all consequences. The War, Navy and Foreign Offices have already expressed regarding the necessary measures.

The Kokumin Shimbun urges that a time limit be set on Britain's reconsideration. Pointing out that the reply was in refined diplomatic phraseology, the papers assert that Britain's hostility toward Japan and as such will become the signal for another anti-British outbreak in Japan.

The journal also fears that Mr. Arita, who it says, has been engaged in his efforts to avoid friction with Britain and America, will be called on by the nation to review and revise his policy promptly to meet efficiently the new international situations being marked with the alignment of Britain, America and Russia.

Britain's refusal to close the Burma Road is due firstly to "a desire to carry favour with the United States, with which Britain desires to take concerted action in the Far East," and secondly, "to an attempt to cover international and domestic prestige lost by the European war," says the Asahi Shimbun.

The paper adds that the Foreign Minister, Mr. Hiroshi Arita, expects a further British reply "within a proper period."

If it repeats the sentiments of yesterday's reply, "the Japanese Government is expected to take the second stage of a strong policy."

The Hochi Shimbun declares that the interview between Mr. Arita and Sir Robert Craigie has clarified that Britain refuses to accept the Japanese demands for 1942. It asserts: "Should Britain continue to refuse the Japanese demands, Japan will attain her objective by taking effective measures literally. It is understood she has already determined on this course of action and concrete measures are now being seriously discussed by the Navy and Foreign Ministries."

Stressing that at a time when the fate of Britain and Europe is very precarious the British Government has adopted a "positive attitude" towards Japan, the Kokumin Shimbun, organ of the Army, says the entire Japanese nation is feeling the feeling of indignation because Britain's pro-Chiang Kai-shek activities have been enhanced, and it is likely this indignation will reach "ignition point."

The newspaper assails Mr. Arita because "his diplomacy, which has always concentrated on the advance of Japanese interests between Britain and the United States, now threatens to develop into a serious domestic issue. The War Minister will shortly convey to the Premier the Army's insistence on the 'renovation' of Japan's foreign policy on the basis of the present golden opportunity."—Reuter.

Cabinet Decision

Tokyo, July 9.
Strong opinion was expressed at to-day's Cabinet meeting in favour of demanding reconsideration by the British Government following the rejection by the Foreign Minister, Mr. Hiroshi Arita, on the refusal by that Government of Japan's representations regarding cessation of the transport of arms and goods in aid of Chungking through Burma and Hongkong.

Every sphere of probability was examined in discussion at to-day's Inner Cabinet meeting of four Ministers, in order to leave nothing unnotified in the possible attitudes to be taken by the British Government in its reply again to be made to the reiterated Japanese demand for the prohibition of the transport of arms through Burma.

The Hochi Shimbun understands that an inter-Departmental conference is already going on between the War, Navy and Foreign Offices regarding measures to be taken by the Japanese Government.—Domei.

RUSSIAN DESIGNS

Expected To Serve New Demands On Turkey

Istanbul, July 9.
Authoritative circles expect that Russia will present demands to Turkey in the next few days. They are expected to be stiffer than the demands made last year, when Russia asked for a mutual assistance pact, a change in the control of the Dardanelles more favourable to Russia, and a diminution in the guarantees given by Turkey to the Allies.

The reopening of Soviet-Turkish conversations, considered very likely. Although the Turks have repeatedly emphasized their desire for peace with the Russians, it is stated that the present outlook for agreement is very dark in view of the failure of last year's talks.—United Press.

Soviet Troops In Iran?

London, July 9.
There was no confirmation in London to-day of a report that Soviet troops were marching into Iran.

New French Constitution

Press Comments On British Reply

Grenoble, July 9.
The Chamber and the Senate will meet in formal assembly to-morrow to approve a Bill granting the French Government power to evolve a new constitution "based on the rights of Labour, the Family, and the Fatherland." The forecast is that M. Laval will be the real power, while Marshal Petain will be the "Chef du pouvoir executif."

According to the majority of Vichy journalists the Government wants a clean sweep, not only of the Constitution, but of most French institutions. They predict, in addition to the deposition of M. Laval, his replacement by Marshal Petain and the formation of a triumvirate composed of M. Laval, M. Marquet, and General Weygand.—United Press.

Resolution Drawn Up

Grenoble, July 9.
The Ministry of the Interior issued a communique in Vichy last night stating that the Council of Ministers, under M. Laval, had adopted a resolution for submission to the National Assembly which will empower the creation of a new Constitution.—United Press.

Terms Of Resolution

Berlin, July 9.
The following resolution is to be submitted by M. Laval at to-day's meeting of the French National Assembly, according to an "official" Vichy despatch to the German "Official News Agency" to-day:—"The National Assembly confers on the Government of the Republic, with the signature and authority of Marshal Petain, power to draw up a new constitution of the French State. The constitution will safeguard the rights of labour, of the family, and of the fatherland. The constitution shall be ratified by the Assembly."

The News Agency claims that the French Assembly adopted the Bill for the reform of the constitution by 395 votes to three.—Reuter.

Punishment For Patriots

Berlin, July 9.
The Official News Agency's Berne correspondent reports that a large group of French Parliamentary Members met at Vichy on Monday evening and unanimously approved a motion summoning the Government immediately to investigate and ensure the just punishment of all political, civilian, and military persons responsible for a declaration favouring continuance of the war and for the inadequacy of the French means of fighting the war.

M. Laval, who addressed the meeting, blamed France's misfortune on the irresponsibility of those who started the war "we unanimously confirm our faith in Marshal Petain," he declared.—United Press.

WAR IN THE AIR

Nazi Raids Attain Faster Tempo

London, July 9.
The German air assault, are beginning to attain blistering tempo, air battles having been waged continuously for 48 hours. Fifteen German aeroplanes were shot down in that time, of which Monday's haul of eight was the largest for one day since the war began.

Pilots and spectators have reported that a score of German planes returned towards the Channel badly riddled and probably were unable to reach home.

The swifter Hurricanes and Spitfires combed out from the clouds a Heinkel and two Junkers and five Messerschmitts and shot them down, flaming on sea and landed at the same time they heavily punished at least two Messerschmitts, one Heinkel bomber, and a number of Dorniers.

A lone raider, from a great height, dropped 20 incendiary bombs on a south-east coast town this morning, starting fires in the outskirts.—United Press.

Air Battle Off Coast

London, July 9.
An air battle took place off the south-east coast this afternoon. Bursts of machinegun fire and the sound of aircraft were heard, but nothing was seen from the shore. The raiders are believed to have been driven off by R.A.F. fighters.—Reuter.

Bombs Wasted In Sea

London, July 9.
At least one enemy bomber is believed to have been hit and crippled when raiders appeared early to-day over the south-east coast of Scotland. They were quickly attacked by R.A.F. fighters. Two bombs were dropped in the sea.—Reuter.

One Killed; One Injured

London, July 9.
One was killed and another injured in a town in South-east England. The only other casualties reported were two people slightly injured in a Scottish town.

Ministerial Communique

London, July 9.
A communique issued jointly to-day by the Air Ministry and the Ministry of Home Security stated:—"Enemy aircraft crossed the eastern and southern coasts of England and North-east Scotland during last night. Bombs were dropped on districts near to the coast. Some damage was done to buildings. Very few casualties have been reported."—United Press.

No Damage Of Consequence

London, July 9.
A communique issued by the Ministry of Home Security to-day stated:—"Sporadic raids by isolated enemy aircraft occurred in North-east and South-east England and the east coast of Scotland during last night and early this morning. High explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped. No damage of consequence was caused."—Reuter Bulletin.

GUILTY BUT INSANE

Oxford Student Gaoled For King's Pleasure for Murder

London, July 9.
Found guilty of murder but insane, J. H. Fuljames, a first year undergraduate of University College, Oxford, was to-day ordered to be kept in custody pending the King's pleasure.

Fuljames fired four shots in the quadrangle of the College on May 17, resulting in the death of C. L. Moffatt and the wounding of two other undergraduates.—Reuter.

RUSSIAN DESIGNS

Expected To Serve New Demands On Turkey

Istanbul, July 9.
Authoritative circles expect that Russia will present demands to Turkey in the next few days. They are expected to be stiffer than the demands made last year, when Russia asked for a mutual assistance pact, a change in the control of the Dardanelles more favourable to Russia, and a diminution in the guarantees given by Turkey to the Allies.

The reopening of Soviet-Turkish conversations, considered very likely. Although the Turks have repeatedly emphasized their desire for peace with the Russians, it is stated that the present outlook for agreement is very dark in view of the failure of last year's talks.—United Press.

THE MAN WHO SAW IT COMING RADIO Churchill Forecast Blitzkrieg 3 years before it happened

Why Hitler is afraid of him

By THE EDITOR

of the "Sunday Chronicle"

THE ROAR OF A PASSING AEROPLANE REACHED OUR EARS IN THE DINING ROOM OF MR. WINSTON CHURCHILL'S HOUSE AT WESTERHAM, KENT.

Across his lunch table, Mr. Churchill said to me: "Every time I hear that, it is like a warning. I wish it had the same effect on everybody in this country."

And then he told me, almost to the day, when and how Germany would plunge the world into war—and the part that the German Air Force would play in the German plans.

It was a remarkable prediction then, for it was three years ago. Hitler was still protesting his friendship with Britain and his peaceful intentions toward the rest of Europe.

Mr. Churchill was one of the few British statesmen who saw clearly that Hitler was lying.

And Mr. Churchill was only a voice—without power in the nation's councils, for he had been out of office eight years.

It seemed that he might be shelved for ever. People called him a brilliant has-been, one who had been near the political summit many times, and now had lost his last chance to attain it.

Built Own Cottage

If anybody had said at that time that Mr. Winston Churchill would within three years be Prime Minister, it would have been an even more remarkable prediction than Mr. Churchill's own talk of the "coming grow."

I do not suppose that Mr. Churchill himself thought of his own political ambitions.

ALL HIS TALK WAS OF HIS COUNTRY'S PERIL, AND HIS REGRET THAT HE WAS POWERLESS TO HELP, EXCEPT BY TALKING.

Westminster is not a great country house in the old tradition, but smallish, unassuming, and comfortable.

From the dining room windows you see a lake in the middle of a green park, not far away, a handsome brick cottage.

Mr. Churchill is proud of that cottage. He built it himself.

With a trowel in his hands and a trade union card in his pocket, he laid the bricks and saw the walls grow.

On the walls of his house are pictures that he has painted.

There, at Westminster, during his years of political inactivity, he worked at the easel and wrote his brilliant books and articles, many of which I have been privileged to publish in the "Sunday Chronicle."

He came down to lunch that day in carpet slippers. At other times I have even seen him going round the house in a workman's blue overalls. I have seen him in carpet slippers at his desk at the Admiralty.

Mr. Churchill's strange hats used to amuse the public, but that was not why he wore them.

He Wore Them

He wore queer hats for the same reason as he wears carpet slippers—to please himself.

IT WAS NOT BY SARTORIAL TRICKS THAT HE CAPTURED THE PUBLIC IMAGINATION, BUT BY BRILLIANT DEEDS, SPEECH, AND WRITING.

He warned the nation. In an article in this newspaper more than two years ago he wrote large figures: "Many people seem to think that everything is all right because we have voted the money and given orders for aeroplanes to the contractors."

"Just because we have voted the money we are deluding ourselves when thinking of these large figures."

"It would not surprise me if Germany were going to spend in 1938 more than twice as much on her Air Force as Great Britain."

"It is fair to assume, even now, that German air power is at least double that of ours—and it is being expanded at least at double our rate."

"We are dwelling side by side with countries which for years have concentrated the whole life of their people on preparing for war, and are developing war power to an extent which has never been dreamed of before."

These were almost the same words that he spoke to me across the lunch table at Westminster.

"Don't be afraid to trust Mr. Chamberlain," he said in a memorable broadcast. "He is a strong man and a tough man."

And now that Mr. Churchill himself is at the helm, he will certainly receive similar loyalty and usefulness from his old chief.

War has always called forth the best qualities of this remarkable man.

£10,000 Lectures

Born of a family who had been in politics for generations, he inherited the military genius of his great ancestor, the Duke of Marlborough.

As a young Hussar officer, not long out of Sandhurst, he went to the Sudan, and had his first taste of war at the taking of Omdurman.

He fought tribesmen in India, and later against the Boers in South Africa, where he became a war correspondent.

CAPTURED BY BOTHA. HE MADE HIS ESCAPE ACROSS 300 MILES OF VELD. THEN HE WROTE A BOOK, AND WENT ON A LECTURE TOUR THAT EARNED £10,000.

That confounded those who had thought that a boy with a limp would never become any sort of public speaker, much less the dynamic orator that Mr. Churchill had made himself.

He needed that £10,000. Mr. Churchill has always had to earn his living. He has earned and spent a great deal of money.

He was already First Lord of the Admiralty when the Great War broke out—and had shown his uncanny rightness by forestalling the enemy and keeping the Fleet mobilised.

It was ready when the call to arms came.

He was almost the only statesman who saw the last war as one great front, stretching from the Arctic to the Black Sea.

HE CHEATED THE AIR FORCE. HE FOSTERED THE IDEA OF TANKS AND SAW IT TRIUMPH.

His daring alarmed his colleagues, and, forsaking politics, he went to the Western Front as a major.

Germany's Rags

Howls of rage came from Germany when the man Hitler hated went to the Admiralty.

They were repeated tenfold on Friday, when Mr. Churchill took over the helm of the ship of State.

One other picture comes to my mind.

It is of Mr. Churchill, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, introducing one of his five Budgets.

Before he starts to speak he looks up to the gallery to catch one pair

Parson Sues His Successor

Called Sneak: Pushed Away: £5 Damages

THE Rev. Joseph Henry James, formerly minister of Ruskin Road Methodist Church, Carshalton, brought an action at Epsom County Court recently against the present minister, the Rev. Norman Landreth, claiming £20 damages for wrongful imprisonment and assault.

The judge said it was a most regrettable case; assault and detention were most trivial. He awarded £5 damages and costs.

Bombs May Be Code To Spies

ODD bombs dropped in isolated parts of the English countryside may not be the haphazard missiles which most people dismiss with derision.

A more sinister theory is that their explosion may herald the dropping of instructions or equipment for fifth columnists at pre-arranged points nearby.

Some weeks ago the idea would have been dismissed as fantastic. Since then so much has happened that it is fantastic that the authorities are taking stringent precautions to cope with this possibility.

It has been generally accepted that this apparently casual unloading of bombs has been to lessen the load and increase the speed of a German plane in an effort to hasten its escape.

How You May Help

But there has been no evidence that the machines were being harried by pursuit planes when they jettisoned their deadly cargoes.

Whatever the reason for this bombing of seemingly non-existent targets, the chances are being taken. Military and police can prevent the approach of all unauthorised persons to the area where an enemy bomb has fallen and they will welcome co-operation from the public.

If there is an explosion near your home—no matter how isolated or unimportant the place may be—you should let the police know without a moment's delay.

There may be an innocent explanation for the bomb falling just there.

On the other hand, it will be just such innocent explanations which the fifth column will seek to exploit.

of eyes, and then waves his hand and smiles.

His wife sits there, smiling back at him.

And now from Westminster to Downing-street, this charming woman, Mr. Churchill's companion of many years, in storm and calm, in the seats of the mighty and in the political wilderness.

Park Speaker Jailed

Sentence of a month's imprisonment was passed on a Hyde Park speaker at Marlborough-street, W., recently for using insulting words and behaviour which might have caused a breach of the peace.

He is twenty-six-year-old John Webster, Independent, of Stanley-crescent, Ladbrooke-grove, W.

According to Mr. E. J. P. Cussen, prosecuting, he said to a meeting: "The bombs placed by the I.R.A. are as much justified as the bomb left for Hitler in the Munich beer cellar."

He also said that Jews in England should be treated as they were in Germany.

Mr. Sandbach, the magistrate, said: "We are at a time of national crisis and it is essential that order should be preserved."

Trawlermen Are Tough

BRITISH trawlermen are as tough in body as they are in spirit.

Skipper Ward, of the steam trawler Saloon, proves it.

He has just come out of hospital, where a piece of his spine had to be cut away to enable a German machine gun bullet to be removed.

The Saloon was fishing in the North Sea when a Heinkel bomber flew low over the trawler and raked the decks with machine-gun fire.

The Saloon Lewis gunner opened fire and the skipper seized a rifle and joined in the fight.

After making four attacks and dropping bombs the Heinkel was badly hit and made off in distress.

The Saloon went on fishing.

Next afternoon two Nazi seaplanes attacked her, but the crew returned fire, and the planes were driven off.

But Skipper Ward and his Lewis gunner had been wounded, so they then hauled up their gear and made for home.

And the skipper remained on his feet until his ship was in harbour.

told the News Chronicle: "When I heard the King's speech I beat it to join up. I left a good job, a good wife and three kids for £s. a day, but I don't regret it."

Smith has not seen his mother or father for 20 years. They live at Benson House, Addfield, London.

Private T. J. O'Shea, a veteran of the last war, declared: "There are thousands more waiting to get over. Recruiting is unnecessary."

"Someone puts up a board saying '100 men wanted,' or whatever number that particular post needs, and within a couple of hours or so they are overwhelmed with applications."

They Wanted To Fight—

Canadians Hid In Troopship

TWENTY-TWO Canadian soldiers who could not get to France quickly enough for their liking, stowed away in troopships which brought the second detachment of Canadians to England recently.

The men were part of the original contingent, but at the last moment lack of accommodation kept them out of the draft.

"They were almost broken-hearted about it," one of their friends told the News Chronicle, "and we were not much surprised when, after a few days out, they were found aboard."

They were severely reprimanded, but in the circumstances have been absorbed into the unit and will be able to fight alongside their friends.

Thousands Waiting

Most of the newly arrived Canadians are from Toronto, but there are French-Canadians in large numbers, Polish-Canadians—and Sam Morgan, of Toronto, a negro.

THE skill and personal bravery of our officers are the principal factors that make up for our numerical inferiority. In engagements with hostile planes our officers often fight against great odds. Some times they can shoot down enemy planes after their own planes have been already damaged.

The names of some of our best air officers and their achievements in shooting down enemy planes follow.

Capt. Liu Jui-kwang shot down 7 hostile planes; Captains Kwang Hsin-Jui, Liu Chung-wu, Chen Jui-tien, each claim 6 hostile planes and Captains Mao Yin-chu, Hwang Pei-yang, Chiu Hsueh-sun and Lo I-ching, each 5 planes.

In this connection, I may recall several deeds of heroism and self-sacrifice on the part of our officers. "While on an expedition to attack the enemy positions in Shanghai in 1937, 2nd Lieut. Yen Hui-wen made a forced landing in the enemy lines after having acquired himself very creditably in the bombing mission. He calmly jumped out from his cockpit, carefully destroyed his plane and shot half a dozen Japanese soldiers who attempted to capture him before he took his own life with the last While fighting single-handed with a number of enemy pursuits in an air combat near Hankow 1st Lieut. Chen Wei-ming found his plane so much damaged that he could no longer carry on the fight. He made straight for the nearest enemy fighter. The collision destroyed both planes and killed the crews. Colonel Wu Ju-ila, at the head of a pursuit squadron, wiped out an enemy bombing squadron near Nanyung. Our aerial attacks on enemy warships have also scored many successes. Up to the present our bombers have hit a total of 194 enemy vessels of which 40 were sunk.

Britain The "Enemy"

Nazi Germany regards the British Empire as her greatest enemy, and at the heart of that enemy she will strike with every means at her command.

Attempts may be made at invasion by sea passage. But no experience in the present war have gone to prove that powerful warships can be driven off the sea by direct air attack; the U-boat is far from being a decisive factor in naval operations; and the Germans have no fleet in being that could challenge the sea power of Britain, let alone the combined strength of the Allied fleets. In face of this Germany could not land forces of adequate strength on the British coast although this hazardous adventure may be attempted. The more hopeful plan would be to infiltrate in small craft to disorganize Britain's war effort. But the invasion of the British Isles by air, to the greatest possible extent, has now been planned within the range of practical operations. With this there would be combined the intensive bombing attack, for which this country has long been prepared.

The Germans would rely on a combination of Fifth Column activities, parachute troops and troop-carrying aircraft. As regards the Fifth Column, the British Government, among other precautions, has rounded up all aliens, whether suspect or not, and Nazi sympathisers wherever they may be. In view of the Fifth Column work in Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium, and France, and Nazi activities in every surviving neutral country within range, it would be criminal to run the risk of what a disabellous cunning secret enemy could do, with his plans for sabotage already laid, and with hidden weapons to his hand.

The Germans are singularly good at exploiting the ideas of others—the tank, for example, was a British invention—and their military authorities were so impressed by the mass parachute descents and troop-carrying aircraft at the Soviet manoeuvres of 1935 that they adopted this technique.

German parachute troops are organised in battalions that are carefully trained in their specialized duties.

Officially their uniform is the German Air Force blue-grey but the men may be disguised—not infrequently in the uniform of the country attacked. A steel helmet like a motorist's, crash-helmet, respirator, hand grenades, a gun firing 500 rounds a minute, and perhaps a collapsible bicycle, are their essential equipment.

Company equipment, dropped in special containers with self-operating parachutes after the men have landed, includes ammunition and rifles, field glasses, compasses, spades, smoke candles and wire.

The battalion auxiliary weapons are the 3-inch mountain gun, medium and light mortars, heavy and light machine guns and machine gun pistols.

Parachute attack is preceded if possible by air reconnaissance. When the parachutists descend 50 feet from their slow-moving plane, it is supposed to be possible for a company to land within an area of about 220 yards by 440, and assemble within a quarter of an hour.

Their functions are to seize aerodromes, power stations, railway junctions and telephone exchanges, and either make these useless or hold them until reinforcements arrive, possibly in answer to their signals. To these activities are added the creation of panic and spread-

CHINESE AIR FORCE

As the Sino-Japanese hostilities enter their fourth year, the public may be interested to know the part played by the Chinese air force.

It is generally admitted that numerically the Japanese air force is overwhelmingly superior to ours.

To a neutral observer it is nothing short of a miracle that we have been able to fight at all successfully in the air against such colossal odds for the past three years and continue to fight with vigour.

THE Chinese air force is of recent creation, dating back hardly half a dozen years.

It was only in 1934 that the squadrons attached to the provincial armies were brought to the fold of the Central Government and placed under one command. Under the able leadership of General Chiang Kal-shek the various flying units were systematically organized, rigid training of personnel was started and above all courage and a strong sense of duty were inspired into every one in the force.

So what we lack in personnel and equipment is made up by the skill and superb morale of our officers which have found expression in numerous engagements with the enemy.

The air warfare in the present Sino-Japanese hostilities may be divided into four phases. The first phase covers the period from the commencement of the Shanghai battle to the fall of Nanking, the second from the fall of Nanking to the fall of Hsuehchow, the third from the fall of Hsuehchow to the fall of the Wu-Han cities and the fourth from the fall of the Wu-Han cities to the present.

The First Phase

AT the very beginning of the hostilities Japanese military leaders were under the delusion that they could wipe out the Chinese air force in a few weeks.

As soon as the war broke out the Japanese high command sent bombing squadrons from islands to attack our air bases at Hangchow, Nanchang and Nanking. In these expeditions the enemy soon found that they had greatly underestimated the strength of their opponent. Japan's first attempt at bombing our air base ended in a stunning blow at Hangchow where eight of her thirteen heavy bombers were shot down on August 14, 1937, the day following the outbreak of the Shanghai hostilities.

A bombing expedition to Nanking on August 15 fared no better. Of the 20 bombers that started from Formosa ten failed to return to their base. On that day hostile bombers were also brought down by us at other places, and the total of the day's "bag" was over 30 heavy bombers. In three weeks both the Kiangsu and the Kiangsi Air Corps, each consisting of about 100 bombers, were practically wiped out by us. The enemy relaxed in September and for three weeks Nanking was free from air raid alarms. Instead of day-bombing they resorted to night raids, and their bombers did not appear in broad daylight without a strong escort of pursuants.

Our first bombing expeditions were sent out on August 14 to attack the hostile warships in the Yangtze Estuary and the Hangchow Bay and at the same time to bomb enemy trenches and military installations in Shanghai. One of the subsequent expeditions was carried out on the night of September 16 when the Kunda Cotton Mill in which the headquarters of the Japanese troops were housed was bombed. As a result, the enemy sustained material losses as well as heavy casualties in personnel.

In the course of the Shanghai fighting the enemy, finding it difficult to make any advance on the Shanghai front, turned their attention to the northern theatre of war where their forces were greatly strengthened in September in the hope of taking Tientsin. To meet the requirements of our ground troops on the northern front, we despatched a number of squadrons to Shansi, where the Japanese fought successfully with the enemy air force at Hsin-kow, Yanglingpao and Taiyuan.

Our bombers made several attacks on the enemy positions at Tating ing false news.

The German military junkers 80 and the civil Junkers 50 can carry 40 fully equipped men at a cruising speed of 200 miles an hour. It was the landing of thousands of men in troop-carrying planes, and not the parachutists, that became a decisive factor in Holland. But it remains to be seen whether these unwieldy machines can penetrate the highly organized British anti-aircraft defences in anything like effective numbers.

and troop trains on the northern section of the Peking-Hankow Railway. A part of our air force was stationed at Canton to patrol the southern sea coast, where we sunk three enemy naval craft by aerial attack. These activities on the part of the Chinese air force marked the first phase of the air war.

The Second Phase

AFTER the fall of Nanking the scene of hostilities gradually shifted to the southern section of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and the enemy advanced on Hsuehchow from North and South.

With greater air base facilities as the result of occupation of our airfields on the sea coast, the strength of the Japanese air force operating in this country was greatly increased.

which took the enemy unawares. During this period we carried out, besides our "good-will mission" to Japan in May, bombing expeditions to the following places: Nanking, Wuhu, Kiangchow, Hangchow, Hsin-kow, Hsuehchow, and other places.

Pengpu, at each of which the Japanese airfields were bombed. The enemy's warships at Tikong, Lukong, Kweichih and Tungliu in the Yangtze and aircraft carriers in Canton waters were subject to repeated air attacks. We also attacked enemy troop positions, railway stations and bridges and troop trains at fourteen different places in Anwei, Shansi and Honan. Our air force also took part in the battle of Talerchwang.

As for the operations of our pursuants, in January, 1938, we brought down three heavy bombers at Nanking. At Hangchow, our airmen in a combat with the enemy on February 18, 1938, shot down eleven raiders. Our pursuants patrolling the southern section of the Canton-Hankow Railway encountered enemy planes near Canton on February 13, 1938, and brought down eight of their 18 pursuants that constituted the escort of a bombing squadron.

APRIL 20, the birthday of the Japanese Emperor, by the irony of fate, has also become a red-letter day in the calendar of the Chinese air force.

In 1938 the enemy celebrated the Emperor's birthday by sending a large number of planes to attack Hongkong. These heavy bombers, escorted by pursuants, made their appearance above the Wuhan cities early that afternoon.

After an engagement of more than an hour with the raiders we "bagged" a total of 21 planes—11 pursuants and 10 heavy bombers. This was followed by the discovery of the wrecks on the spot.

It is, however, believed that the enemy's losses were much heavier. According to a Shanghai press report, 33 of the planes failed to return to their base. In this engagement our losses were four planes destroyed and three men wounded.

On May 21, 1938, the Japanese made another attempt to attack Hangchow from the air with a fleet of 60 planes: 39 pursuants and 21 heavy bombers. They were met by our pursuants, and after an hour's engagement, 13 hostile planes lay wrecked at different places in the neighbourhood of the Wu-Han cities. We lost three planes with one man killed and one wounded.

Other air combats during this period included two engagements above Kweichih, on March 25 and April 10 and those above Loyang and Changsha.

The Third Phase

AFTER the fall of Hsuehchow the enemy advanced on Hankow by land and water.

In June, 1938, they captured Anking and a fortnight later the forts at Matang fell into their hands. The enemy made Nanking and Wuhu their principal air bases, from which squadrons of heavy bombers were daily sent out to bombard Hankow, Nanchang and Hengyang.

Our air force was equally active. Every day we despatched bombing squadrons to attack the enemy warships and transports in the Yangtze and their lines of communications in the rear. Raids on enemy aerodromes at Nanking, Wuhu and Anking were occasionally made.

As a result, 33 naval vessels in the Yangtze were sunk, and 100 others damaged and a great number of aeroplanes destroyed on the ground. A series of air combats were fought at Mamochi, Hsin-kow, Yangyang, Kunming and Hsinyang in each of which losses were inflicted on the enemy.

In one of the raids on Nanyang in June, a squadron of six hostile heavy bombers were shot down by us and in August, eight enemy planes were destroyed when they attempted to bomb the southern section of the Canton-Hankow Railway. In September and October our bombers were busy with ground strafing and bombing of enemy artillery emplacements at Yanghsing, Lushan and Hsinyang.

The Fourth Phase

DURING 1939 our air force, like our army, was greatly strengthened and a new strategy and new tactics were accordingly adopted.

In both our offensive and defensive moves, better results were achieved. With regard to the activities of our bombers, expeditions were sent to Yunching, the enemy advance air base in the northern theatre of war, on February 5 and April 2 and 20. On October 8 and 14 we attacked the Honkew aerodrome, the chief Japanese air base in Central China. On the latter two occasions we destroyed more than 80 planes on the ground in addition to shooting down several pursuants in the air. The other losses sustained by the Japanese included over 30 military trucks, 54,000 gallons of gasoline and some ammunition dumps.

Our pursuants also gave a good account of themselves in a number of combats with air raiders. In the engagements with hostile planes at Lanchow on February 23 and 25, fifteen heavy bombers of Type No. 97 and Fiat BR-20 were brought down and 53 airmen were killed.

Among the crew killed were one squadron leader and two others holding the rank of captain. The material losses sustained by the Japanese were estimated at U.S.$10,000,000. On April 29 two Japanese pursuants of Type No. 97 were shot down at Hancheng (Hanchung) and on May 3 seven heavy bombers of Type No. 96 were destroyed at Chungking.

On November 4 our pursuants attacked a fleet of 54 hostile heavy bombers above Chengtu. It was believed that at least five of the air raiders were brought down but so far the wrecks of only three have been discovered. Among the 18 dead who formed the crews of the ill-starred bombers, were a Japanese Naval Captain who was supposed to be a Japanese air ace, one squadron leader and another Japanese air officer holding the rank of Captain. The losses inflicted on the enemy were heavy as those killed represented the cream of the Japanese air force.

IN this connection it may also be mentioned that on February 2, 1939, we brought down a Japanese heavy bomber, a Fiat BR-20, at Shayang.

Among the crew of six persons there was one Watanabe, Chief Armourer of the Japanese Air Force Headquarters, holding the rank of Naval Captain, and one Lieutenant Commander, a pilot who had established a world distance record of close circuit.

The close of 1939 was marked by a series of air raids on Lanchow. As a result of combats on December 26, 27 and 28 we brought down ten heavy bombers. We celebrated the New Year of 1940 with a number of successful air raids on Japanese trenches, troop concentrations, motor transport columns and ammunition dumps at Nanning and its vicinity. Our attack on the Nanning aerodrome resulted in the destruction of eleven enemy planes on the ground, and our pursuants brought down one Japanese heavy bomber and ten pursuants in a series of encounters at Kweliu, Luchow and Kunlungwan. On New Year's Day of 1940 one of the latest Japanese observation planes was brought down at Linling. The enemy's air raids on Mengtze on February 1, 3, 13 and 17 resulted in the loss of three heavy bombers of Type No. 98 which were brought down by our pursuants. In the past two months our bombers were also active.

The notable expeditions they carried out were the attack of the enemy air base at Yuncheng on April 3, and on the enemy military depots, field headquarters, motor transport columns, and advance air fields at Yoyang, Hsinyang and Chungshing and enemy naval crafts in the Tungting Lake.

These aerial activities formed a prelude to the recent victory of our ground forces in Northern Hupei and southern Honan.

Our anti-aircraft units come in for a share of the achievements in our air defence. They give a good account of themselves in the present war. The following instances will illustrate the effectiveness of our anti-aircraft fire.

On September 20, 1937, the Japanese sent 98 light bombers to bombard Nanking in four successive waves. In the first raid five raiders were brought down by our anti-aircraft fire, and at the end of the day our ground batteries had "bagged" a total of 12 planes. Once a flight of three air raiders were brought down by one shot when a bomb-laden plane was set on fire by a direct hit and the explosion of its tank destroyed the other two. This occurred at Kintan on November 27, 1937. On the night of October 10, 1938, Japanese air raiders bombarded Hengyang in five successive waves during which six raiders were shot down by our anti-aircraft fire. Our ground batteries also played a significant part in the defence of the important railways such as the Tientsin-Pukow and Peking-Hankow Railways during the first stage of the war. The presence of anti-aircraft batteries at the various important railway junctions prevented enemy bombers from low-altitude flying and rendered their aerial attacks ineffective. The precautions we take against air raids have proven adequate. The relentless attacks on our people by the enemy would have inflicted far more appalling losses on our civilian life and property had not such precautions been taken.

AS a result of the past three years' air operations, we destroyed up to April 30, 1940, a total of 848 enemy planes which have been confirmed by the discovery of the wrecks or information from reliable sources.

The enemy planes lost due to accidents or other causes and those damaged by us but dropped behind the enemy's lines are not included. If the latter item is also taken into account, the total exceeds one thousand. Of the 848 planes referred to, 256 were brought down by our pursuants, 407 were destroyed on the ground by aerial attacks and the rest were shot down by our anti-aircraft batteries and other military units. Altogether we have buried 1,055 dead Japanese airmen in addition to taking 51 prisoners. Forty-two Japanese airmen who came to the ground with their planes are missing. It is believed that the enemy's loss in personnel is much heavier by reason of the fact that among their planes destroyed there is a fairly high percentage of heavy bombers each of which accommodates a crew of seven.

When an enemy plane was damaged, its crew usually attempted to save their lives by parachute jumping. In most cases, they succeeded in reaching the ground without a scratch, though some of the unfortunate ones were badly burned or otherwise wounded. The 51 prisoners we have captured are now quartered in comfortable camps, well-fed, well-clothed and well-cared for. The monthly food allowance for the prisoners compares favourably with our own officers' mess bills.

The prisoners are allowed to enjoy such luxuries as cigarettes which are distributed among them according to their rank. The officers are better treated. Stationery, books and newspapers are provided for them. With the exception of the daily physical exercise which is compulsory, the prisoners are free to devise means for their own recreation and amusement. Among the captured Japanese airmen are one Lieutenant-Commander, and one 1st Lieutenant of the Japanese Navy. Most of the others are non-commissioned officers and first class airmen. Japanese air crews as a rule are very superstitious. On the bodies of their dead we find

French Submission

Head Of Alexandria Fleet Bow To Necessity

Alexandria, July 9. An official statement concerning the French fleet here was issued today by the French naval authorities. It declares: "In the Mediterranean fleet the closest comradeship and goodwill existed between the Allied forces conducting the war from Alexandria. As soon as it was realised that France would have to surrender, consultations were held between the Commander-in-Chief and Admiral Godfrey in the hope that it might be possible to continue the fight side by side. When the terms of the armistice were known it became evident that a new situation had developed and Admiral Godfrey was therefore asked to consider various proposals on the lines of those sent at Oran. "Seeing that, in a foreign harbour and in the presence of a greatly superior British fleet, there was no possibility of taking the French ships to sea, and that the attempt would only endanger French lives, Admiral Godfrey agreed to put his ships in a condition in which they could not go to sea. This was done by reducing the oil aboard so that they would be incapable of sailing in the harbour. "He also agreed to demilitarise the ships, which was done by landing certain portions of the armament and placing them under the care of the French authorities ashore. Admiral Godfrey also reduced the crews in order to leave sufficient only for the care and maintenance of the vessels. The crews who had left were sent to Syria from where they intended to continue to France."—Reuter.

Mr. A. V. Alexander Dramatically Tells Of— HOW THE FRENCH FLEET WAS DESTROYED

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Mr. A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, asked by private notice at question time to make a statement on the naval situation, was received with cheers as he rose in the House of Commons to say: "The House will remember that on July 4 the Prime Minister described the painful but very necessary action which had been taken the previous day to prevent units of the French fleet lying in British and north African ports from passing into enemy control."

"Since then the Royal Navy has carried out two further operations designed to increase the security of this country against the use of French warships by the enemy."

"On July 6, a French battle cruiser of the Dunkirk class which had been damaged and driven ashore at Oran was attacked by aircraft and the fleet air arm, which obtained six hits. As a result, this powerful ship will be incapable of effective use for a very long time."

The Affair At Dakar
"Apart from ships thus dealt with, there lay at Dakar, in French West Africa, the 35,000-ton battleship Richelieu which had just been completed, and was the most modern and formidable capital ship in the world, and was immediately available for active operations."

"In accordance with the decision announced to the House by the Prime Minister, His Majesty's Government decided that steps must also be taken to ensure that this vessel did not fall into enemy hands in a condition in which she could be used against us. "A force was accordingly despatched to Dakar in order to present the French Admiral with three proposals similar to those offered to the French commander at Oran. On July 7, a flag-officer was entrusted with this operation, and he sent one of his captains ahead in a loop in order to present the terms in person. On arrival this ship was informed by the French authorities that they would open fire if she approached close to port, and it was only after an interval that the French consented to receive this communication by signal."

Four Terms Offered
Mr. Alexander here recapitulated the alternatives offered to the Admiral at Dakar, which he thought desirable in view of the statements which were made by the French Government concerning the terms offered at Oran.

Magnificent Skill
"A ship's boat under the command of Lieut. Commander R. E. I. Bristol was sent into the harbour carrying depth charges. With great daring the boat successfully passed the boom defences and went alongside the port quarter of the Richelieu. At the right moment, the depth charges were dropped close under the stern of the warship, as she lay at anchor in shallow water, in order to damage her propeller and steering gear. The motor boat began to withdraw immediately after dropping the depth charges. (Laughter and cheers). "But while still in the harbour broke down and lay helpless for a time."

"The crew, however, succeeded in getting one engine running just as they were discovered, and the boat, which was pursued, managed to escape by crossing the harbour defence nets which then fouled its pursuer. (Laughter and cheers). "I am sure the House will join with me in paying tribute to the gallantry and skill with which the operation was carried out. It must be obvious to the House that whoever undertook an operation like that ran the risk the whole time of blowing himself up."

Main Air Attack
"The main attack was entrusted to aircraft of the Fleet air arm, and took place after the attack by the motor boat. These aircraft were successful with their torpedoes, a number of which hit the Richelieu."

"The motor boat which was still in the harbour witnessed the aircraft attack and heard five explosions, then saw smoke issuing from the battleship. Air reconnaissance also carried out has established that the Richelieu has a list to port and is down by the stern. A large quantity of oil covered the water around the ship."

"All our aircraft returned safely in spite of heavy anti-aircraft fire. "I would desire, as I am sure you would, to pay tribute to the skill and efficiency and courage with which this action was carried out by the officers and men concerned. (Cheers)."

What French Have Lost
"The House will appreciate the result of this painful action which we had to take. When France signed the armistice she had eight capital ships at sea, a line of battle under present conditions. Three of the Breizans and Courbet classes have now passed under our control. One has been sunk, one badly damaged and immobilised."

"Of the two modern battle-cruisers, one has been driven ashore at Oran and will be out of action for a long time to come—if not permanently. The other, managed, as the Prime Minister told the House, to escape and is 'presumed to have reached Toulon, but only after having been

Futile Nazi Attempts To Penetrate Defences

NEW AIR BATTLE OVER S. E. COAST

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—An air battle took place over south-east England this afternoon. As soon as the enemy aircraft crossed the coast from the north-east, they were engaged by fighters out of sight in the clouds.

Rapid machine-gun bursts were frequent and spent cartridges came down like hail over a town.

The raiders then flew westwards over another town. Here a dogfight came into view.

British fighters attacked the raiders and finally drove them off to the south.

A south-west town had a daylight raid in the afternoon when a single bomber dropped bombs. The extent of the damage is not known. The raider flew fairly low and was hotly attacked by guns.

Another raider from a higher altitude dropped bombs which fell in a field.

At least two were killed and a few injured in an air raid in a Welsh area this afternoon.

Four Nazis Downed

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—It is officially announced that two enemy bombers and one fighter were destroyed by British fighters and one enemy fighter by anti-aircraft fire in enemy bombing attacks on several districts in England to-day.

An Air Ministry communique announcing this states that enemy aircraft made bombing attacks in several districts. Some damage was done to premises at a Bristol Channel port and a few casualties were caused.

Fighter aircraft and anti-aircraft guns went into action and losses were inflicted on the enemy.

Position At Alexandria
ALEXANDRIA, July 9 (Reuter).—Further details of the statement issued by the British naval authorities regarding the French Fleet at Alexandria are available. The statement adds: "On their part the British Government have guaranteed the supplies and pay for the French crews remaining and also their return to France at the end of the war."

"This is how matters stand at present. It is hoped that these conditions may continue. "In the Eastern Mediterranean, the terrible events of which we all know have been avoided and the best hope is that our good relations here may continue as before."

"Our only wish throughout has been to make sure that Italians and Germans should not possess French ships in order to use them against the British, who are still fighting on to defeat Germany and Italy and to re-establish France."

Both Parties Claim To Have Topped Poll

Mexico City, July 9. President Cardenas may be compelled personally to end the deadlock in the rival party claims to success in the elections.

An incomplete estimate gives Sr. Camacho 2,172,216 votes and Sr. Almazan 601,414, but the Almazanistas insist that the big majority is theirs.

An official tabulation will be made on Thursday but the results will not be proclaimed publicly until Congress meets on September 1.—United Press.

Oil Supply Problem

Germany's Conquests Bring New Responsibilities

LONDON, July 9. Neither France nor Europe is self-sufficient in food and the raw materials for agriculture, states a commentary to-day on Germany's domination of France. Moreover, the harvest was reduced by the severe winter, the withdrawal of manpower, and the destruction caused by the invasion.

The food problem next winter will be very serious. France produces only two-thirds of her requirements in coal and Germany must supply 25,000,000 tons a year. Except for bauxite, France does not produce the non-ferrous and steel alloy metals that Germany lacks. The textile industries are useless without raw materials.

The chief weakness is oil. Normally the European countries for which the Nazis are directly or indirectly responsible consume annually 27,000,000 tons of oil and cannot reduce this consumption below 18,000,000 tons without crippling industry and trade, but Europe, apart from Russia, is unable to produce this quantity. Rumania cannot exceed 5,000,000 tons, France, Albania, Hungary, and Estonia can produce about 300,000 tons each.

Even if the whole Rumanian output is retained in Europe Germany has only about 12,000,000 tons, which is insufficient to deploy her whole military strength against Britain or maintain it indefinitely at its present level.—Reuter.

Tale Of German Losses

Berlin, July 9. Long lists of private death notices daily appear in all the German papers, reflecting the casualties in the last weeks of fighting in France. It appears that the heaviest losses occurred in the crossing of the Aisne on June 9 and in the storming of the Maginot Line at Verdun.—United Press.

Richelieu Eliminated

LONDON, July 9. It is learned in London that yesterday the Royal Navy continued operations to prevent important units of the French Fleet from falling into enemy hands by a successful action against the most recently completed French capital ship, the battleship Richelieu, of 35,000 tons.—Reuter.

Battle Necessary?

LONDON, July 9. Though details are lacking it is believed that the elimination of the danger of the Richelieu falling into enemy hands may have involved a battle.

The Richelieu was last reported in the South Atlantic after she had left Casablanca just before the German armistice. Her elimination leaves only one of France's seven battleships unaccounted for, namely, the Richelieu's semi-completed sister ship Jean Bart, which was last reported to have been towed to Casablanca.—United Press.

Six Account For

LONDON, July 9. The present disposition of France's capital ships, according to an official statement issued to-day, is as follows:

The Richelieu was prevented from falling into enemy hands on Monday, but is reported to have been heavily damaged.

The Strasbourg escaped damage and sailed to Toulon.

The Dunkerque lies, heavily damaged, at Oran.

The Bretagne was sunk and the Provence set on fire at Oran.

One battleship is immobilised at Alexandria; two are immobilised in British ports.

The Jean Bart and one other battleship, partially completed, are not officially reported.—United Press.

Snakes At Sheungshiu: Preventing Enemy Landings at Home

(By "Birdie")

SNAKES ARE BEGINNING to offer fresh hazards at the Country Club, Sheungshiu, and in the interests of golfers there, I made a few enquiries from our nature expert about the reptiles. Rain, it seems, has driven them out of their holes and nests, and I can sympathise with the snakes to a certain extent in their apprehension over drowning. I paddled down the course last Sunday and only touched dry ground when I reached the greens.

Over twenty seven inches of rain fell during June and the few days of July to date. Twenty-five of those inches, I should say, are still just below the surface and the other two on top.

However, returning to snakes. Most golfers must, at one time or another, have come across these pleasant little companions, and, no doubt, have been instrumental in their destruction, for unless one really knows what one is dealing with it is best to be on the safe side.

At the Country Club there appears to be mainly two kinds—(1) a harmless rat and frog killer, and (2) a grass viper that is deadly. I killed one of each kind last Sunday with the intention of bringing them back for identification. I stored them snugly in one of the cups on the practice green and then forgot all about them. However, I expect and hope the green-keeper found them.

The first of these snakes is a blackish-grey in colour on its back and sides, and is whitish underneath. This is the harmless one—or so I was told when I described it.

The second is a distinct but dull green with a slender tapering head. Against the fairways they are fairly difficult to detect, and I doubt if they would be seen if they did not move. This, I am told, is the dangerous viper. It is comparatively small—I haven't seen one over 18 inches long—but is also comparatively brave.

The harmless fellow will glide away, or try to, when footsteps approach, perhaps, unlike the viper, it knows it is without any offensive weapon. These grow to quite some size. I have seen one about four feet long.

But the little grass viper took several slabs at my driver before I knocked him out. Note the use of the driver—it is the longest club in the bag.

I don't know what trouble they have at the Royal Hongkong Golf Club with snakes, but at the Kowloon Golf Club and the Country Club, Shek-O, they are rare. Record "bag" at Sheungshiu last autumn was four in a day.

THE rain that drove the snakes out lies deep on the course. Casual water and plugged balls are a stroke by stroke occurrence. The 8th green is unplayable and has been for the past five weeks, while the 1st, 2nd and 3rd fairways are in valleys and retain enough water to keep an army several weeks in a desert.

A little more of this weather and I am afraid that all the grass on the course will be drowned—if it isn't already.

IN talking of snakes as fresh hazards out here, consider the new obstacles that litter the courses at home. To prevent enemy landings by aeroplane, trenches are being dug and have been dug across fairways, and other hazards in the shape of old tractors, rollers and lorries have been strewn about the approaches on long holes.

One golf club has gone so far as to plant unused railway sleepers upright for the whole length of holes of 300 yards or more. While yet another oddity is the placing of a strong wire across the fairway three feet above the ground. This, it is said, is sufficient to overturn any landing plane.

War-time golfers might find that these odd further splices to the game—though I doubt if there is time to spare for golf over there at the moment.

OTHER golf news from home is that Edinburgh University have retained the Scottish inter-University Women's golf championship by defeating St. Andrews 7 matches to 3, with one match halved.

This was played over the Eden course, St. Andrews. The holders were successful in four of the forenoon singles, and won all four matches in the afternoon. Previously, Edinburgh defeated Glasgow 10-2, while St. Andrews beat the same University 11-1. Aberdeen did not enter a team.

W. L. HARDIE, assistant secretary of the R. and A. Golf Club for the last four years, has

Tennis Star Joins Royal Air Force

Murray Deloford, one of our youngest and brightest lawn tennis stars, is the newest sporting recruit to the Royal Air Force. He has joined as an A/C 2, but hopes to get a commission in the near future.

Deloford's entry into the ranks of the R.A.F. means that all but the first two and the last two of the official L.T.A. ranking list have now joined up. It is said that a young player of such talent as Deloford should have his career so rudely interrupted at such an important phase. After winning the British Junior Championship at the age of 17, he quickly made his mark in senior tennis, and the following year recorded a creditable victory over V. G. Kirby. This year it seemed touch-and-go whether he would get a place in our Davis Cup team.

He was passed over, but undaunted, went on to show what he could at Wimbledon by a fine win over D. Mitic, the Yugoslavian Davis Cup player—only to meet his Waterloo in the next round at the hands of F. Kukuljevic, also of Yugoslavia. As the Yugoslavian Davis Cup team won the European Zone final against Germany this was not such bad form.

succeeded the late Mr. H. Gullen as secretary. Mr. Gullen is well-known in many parts of the world, and has been R. and A. secretary for the past 28 years. As Britain's ambassador of golf he travelled extensively in charge of many international teams, and accompanied the Walker Cup teams to America. That the British Amateur and Professional Championships have become among the most popular and esteemed competitions of the world has been credited to his organising ability.

His successor, however, has also had much experience in the organising of championships, and the future of the Club is confidently left in his capable hands.

OTWAY HAYES, amateur champion of South Africa, has, at the age of 21, followed in the footsteps of Bobby Locke and has turned professional.

COUNTY CRICKET London Counties Defeat Cheam And Guildford Surrey Beat Richmond

LONDON COUNTIES and two British Empire XI's featured in four of the five matches recently played at Home, Surrey, in the remaining game, beating Richmond by 30 runs. The latter game was marked by a lively innings of 55 by P. G. H. Fender.

Century For Hulme

LONDON COUNTIES, in a one-day match, passed Cheam's total for the loss of 4 wickets, had for their top scorer Joe Hulme. The Middlesex cricketer reached his century in 80 minutes and got 7 sixes. Best strokes of Eastman were a six and 8 fours, while Farr hit 3 fours. Cheam lost four men for 12 and then recovered as the result of good batting by Randall and Ryder, who got most of his runs by cutting and leg hitting. When tried a second time Durston took the last three wickets with 12 balls for 3 runs.

COUNCIL OFFICIAL DROVE FATAL CAR

The driver of a non-stop car which fatally injured a woman at Howick near Preston, on the night of April 5 was disclosed at the inquest recently by Mr. Charles Smith, Lancaster Corporation transport manager, of Rossmoyne-road, Scotforth, Lancaster.

The dead woman was Mrs. Lavinia Jackson, aged 39, of Howick.

Evidence was given by Mrs. Maggie Wint, of the Mason's Arms, St. James's-street, Burnley, that she was returning in Mr. Smith's car from the races at Aintree.

Mrs. Wint said there was no special hurry, and that neither she nor Mr. Smith had any intoxicants.

The deputy-coroner, who said he had a statement by Mr. Smith that he thought he had run into a black cow, returned a verdict of "Death by misadventure" and said he had been in collision with somebody and was anxious to conceal his whereabouts on the road and whom he was with. There were no allegations, however, of such culpable driving as would amount to manslaughter.

HORSES SAVE MAN'S LIFE

MR. FREDERICK FORD, 64-year-old Suffolk magistrate and farmer, owes his life to two of his old farm horses.

Mr. Ford was lying seriously ill at his home at Copdock, near Ipswich. The horses had carried him home, unattended, after he collapsed on the back of one of them in his fields.

Along Main Road

The horses brought him across fields, through the village street, along the main London road with its three lines of traffic, and then crossing the road down the lane to Mr. Ford's farmhouse, by the centuries-old parish church.

Mr. Ford was unable to move and delirious when he arrived there. "My husband had a terrible heart attack," Mrs. Ford told the "Daily Herald."

Off To Stable

"The two old mares, which we have had for a number of years, walked on into their stable after my husband had been lifted from Blossom's back. There they waited patiently to be unhitched. "There is no doubt that my husband owes his life to them."

A villager said "I saw Mr. Ford slumped on the back of one of his chestnuts with the other leading the way. I wondered what was wrong when he did not speak, but I never guessed that he was so ill."

Mr. Ford is a justice of the Sumford (Ipswich) Bench, and a member of the local education authority.

He can remember nothing of his collapse and has no recollection of how he reached home.

King Leopold's Evil Genius Was A Pro-Nazi Hanger-On

FRESH evidence that King Leopold's capitulation was from the first a "put-up job" has been given me by a man who was on the spot at that time.

His name, for obvious reasons, cannot be given, but he was in a peculiarly good position to know what was going on in Belgium during the early days of the invasion.

In addition, he has known King Leopold himself well over a number of years, and he stresses the change of character that has taken place in him, writes a correspondent.

As a youth Leopold was studious, hard-working, zealous; but since the tragic death of his wife he has been a man living in moroseness, sometimes on the edge of tears, with extreme vacillation of character.

Sinister

His evil genius, this man confirms, was General Van Overstraten, whom he sent to see Mussolini before the capitulation.

"As a young soldier," I was told, "Van Overstraten was a hanger on at the Court."

"He was a great man for social life; a clever man, but sinister, and most unpleasant. "He was pro-German. There is little doubt that he was the devil in the box—and I think that—if you follow the future career of General Van Overstraten and his wife in a Belgium under German rule, you will find that they have plenty of money and power."

As further light on Belgium before the invasion, my informant pointed out that the Germans had 430 diplomatic passports for ears in Brussels themselves.

Nazi Monroe Doctrine

Rome, July 9.
Informed circles to-day envisaged a Monroe Doctrine for Europe directed by the Axis following a statement by the official spokesman, in that the talks of Count Ciano in Berlin were concerned with military and political problems resulting from the war.

"The Axis has shown itself not only a military but a political instrument," they declared. "After the forthcoming final victory the Axis feels that it has a responsibility of a European character."—United Press.

BRITAIN SPENDS £7,500,000 A DAY ON WAR

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—In the House of Commons to-day, Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, moved a vote of credit of £1,000,000,000 for war expenditure.

It will be recalled that on March 18 the House approved a credit of £700,000,000. Over £575,000,000 of this sum is already expended.

For the last four weeks, the average rate of expenditure directly on the war equaled over £7,500,000 a day, of which £6,500,000 was spent on the Navy, Army, Air Force, Ministry of Supply and aircraft production.

The remainder was spent on other war service like shipping, food, home security, etc.

More Taxation Hint

These figures, Sir Kingsley declared, are further proof of our fixed determination to achieve victory. The gap between revenue and expenditure is widening. Further contribution from taxation towards the cost of the war must be the highest possible, and must soon be made. It is imperative that we should make up the necessary financial sacrifice.

The House unanimously agreed to the £1,000,000,000 credit and went into a secret session on economic warfare.

THE MAN WHO SAW IT COMING

Churchill Forecast Blitzkrieg 3 years before it happened

Why Hitler is afraid of him

By THE EDITOR

of the "Sunday Chronicle"

THE ROAR OF A PASSING AEROPLANE REACHED OUR EARS IN THE DINING ROOM OF MR. WINSTON CHURCHILL'S HOUSE AT WESTERHAM, KENT.

Across his lunch table, Mr. Churchill said to me: "Every time I hear that, it is like a warning. I wish it had the same effect on everybody in this country."

And then he told me, almost to the day, when and how Germany would plunge the world into war—and the part that the German Air Force would play in the German plans.

It was a remarkable prediction then, for it was three years ago. Hitler was still protesting his friendship with Britain and his peaceful intentions toward the rest of Europe.

Mr. Churchill was one of the few British statesmen who saw clearly that Hitler was lying.

And Mr. Churchill was only a voice—without power in the nation's councils, for he had been out of office eight years.

It seemed that he might be shelved for ever. People called him a brilliant politician, one who had been near the political summit many times, and now had lost his last chance to attain it.

Built Own Cottage
If anybody had said at that time that Mr. Winston Churchill would within three years be Prime Minister, it would have been an even more remarkable prediction than Mr. Churchill's own talk of the coming war.

I do not suppose that Mr. Churchill himself thought of his own political position.

ALL HIS TALK WAS OF HIS COUNTRY'S PERIL, AND HIS REGRET THAT HE WAS POWERLESS TO HELP, EXCEPT BY TALKING.

Westerham is not a great country house in a great country, but smallish, unassuming, and comfortable.

From the dining room windows you see a lake in the middle of a green park, and, not far away, a handsome brick cottage.

Mr. Churchill is proud of that cottage. He built it himself.

With a trowel in his hands and a trade union card in his pocket, he laid the bricks and saw the walls grow.

On the walls of his house are pictures that he has painted.

There, at lunch during his days of political inactivity, he worked at the easel and wrote his brilliant books and articles, many of which I have been privileged to publish in the "Sunday Chronicle."

He came down to lunch that day in carpet slippers. At other times I have even seen him going round the house in a workman's blue overalls. I have seen him in carpet slippers at his desk at the Admiralty.

Mr. Churchill's strange hats used to amuse the public, but that was not why he wore them.

He Wore Us
He wore queer hats for the same reason as he wears carpet slippers—to please himself.

IT WAS NOT BY SARTORIAL TRICKS THAT HE CAPTURED THE PUBLIC IMAGINATION, BUT BY BRILLIANT DEEDS, SPEECH, AND WRITING.

He warned the nation. In an article in this newspaper more than two years ago he wrote:

"Many people seem to think that everything is all right because we have voted the money and given orders for aeroplanes to the contractors."

"Just because we have voted the money we are deluding ourselves when thinking of these large figures."

"It would not surprise me if the Germans were going to spend in 1938 more than twice as much on their Air Force as Great Britain."

"It is fair to assume, even now, that German air power is at least double that of ours—and is being expanded at least at double our rate."

"We are dwelling side by side with countries which for years have concentrated the whole life of their peoples on preparing for war, and are developing war power to an extent which has never been dreamed of before."

These were almost the same words that he spoke to me across the lunch table at Westerham.

"Don't be afraid to trust Mr. Chamberlain," he said in a memorable broadcast. "He is a strong man and a tough man."

And now that Mr. Churchill himself is at the helm, he will certainly receive similar loyalty and usefulness from his old chief.

War has always called forth the best qualities of this remarkable man.

£10,000 Lectures
Born of a family who had been in politics for generations, he inherited the military genius of his great ancestor, the Duke of Marlborough.

As a young Hussar officer, not long out of Sandhurst, he went to the Sudan, and had his first taste of war at the battle of Omdurman.

He fought tribesmen in India, and later against the Boers in South Africa, where he became a war correspondent.

CAPTURED BY BOTHA, HE MADE HIS ESCAPE AFTER 300 MILES OF VELOCITIES. THEN HE WROTE A BOOK, AND WENT ON A LECTURE TOUR THAT EARNED £10,000.

That confounded those who had thought that a boy with a lip would never become any sort of public speaker, much less the dynamic orator that Mr. Churchill had made himself.

He needed that £10,000. Mr. Churchill has always had to earn his living. He has earned and spent a great deal of money.

He was already First Lord of the Admiralty when the Great War broke out—and had shown his uncanny rightness by forestalling the enemy and keeping the Fleet mobilised.

It was ready when the call to arms came.

He was almost the only statesman who saw the last war as one great front, stretching from the Arctic to the Black Sea.

HE CREATED THE AIR FORCE, HE FOSTERED THE IDEA OF TANKS AND SAW IT TRIUMPH.

His daring alarmed his colleagues, and, foretelling politics, he went to the Western Front as a major.

Germany's Rage
Howls of rage came from Germany when the man Hitler hated went to the Admiralty.

They were repeated tenfold on Friday, when Mr. Churchill took over the helm of the ship of State.

One other picture comes to my mind.

It is of Mr. Churchill, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, introducing one of his Budgets.

Before he starts to speak he looks up to the gallery to catch one pair

Until France fell under Nazi domination, these German prisoners were out of war for duration. They were captured by French during first days of Nazi push through Low Countries. Here they're shown in French internment camp.

Parson Sues His Successor

Called Sneak: Pushed Away: £5 Damages

THE Rev. Joseph Henry James, formerly minister of Ruskin Road Methodist Church, Carshalton, brought an action at Epsom County Court recently against the present minister, the Rev. Norman Landreth, claiming £20 damages for wrongful imprisonment and assault.

The judge said it was a most regrettable case; assault and detention were most trivial. He awarded £5 damages and costs.

Mr. James, who has now retired, said he went to have a talk over certain matters connected with the church and was called a sneak. When he rose to go he was pushed away from the door and held prisoner for at least five minutes.

Damages for Charity
His object was to free the church of a scandal. Any damages would be given to charity.

For the defence it was stated that it was unkind of Mr. James to try to open the door against Mr. Landreth, and then Mr. Landreth, realising that he would not listen, stood aside.

He also said that Jews in England should be treated as they were in Germany.

Mr. Sandbach, the magistrate, said: "We are at a time of national crisis and it is essential that order should be preserved."

They Wanted To Fight—
Canadians Hid In Troopship

Twenty-two Canadian soldiers who could not get to France quickly enough for their liking, stowed away in troopships which brought the second detachment of Canadians to England recently.

The men were part of the original contingent, but at the last moment lack of accommodation kept them out of the draft.

"They were almost broken-hearted about it," one of their friends told the News Chronicle, "and we were not much surprised when, after a few days out, they were found aboard."

They were severely reprimanded, but in the circumstances have been absorbed into the unit and will be able to fight alongside their friends.

Thousands Waiting
Most of the newly arrived Canadians are from Toronto, but there are French-Canadians in large numbers, Polish-Canadians and Sam Morgan, of Toronto, a negro.

Staff Sergeant John Edward Smith of eyes, and then waves his hand and smiles.

His wife sits there, smiling back at him.

And now from Westerham to Downing-street comes this charming woman, Mr. Churchill's companion of many years, in storm and calm, in the seats of the mighty and in the political wilderness.

Park Speaker Jailed

Sentence of a month's imprisonment was passed on a Hyde Park speaker at Marlborough-street, W., recently for using insulting words and behaviour which might have caused a breach of the peace.

He is twenty-six-year-old John Webster, independent, of Stanley-crescent, Ladbrooke-grove, W.

According to Mr. E. J. F. Cussen, prosecuting, he said to a meeting: "The bombs placed by the I.R.A. are as much justified as the bomb left for Hitler in the Munich beer cellar."

He also said that Jews in England should be treated as they were in Germany.

Mr. Sandbach, the magistrate, said: "We are at a time of national crisis and it is essential that order should be preserved."

Trawlermen Are Tough

BRITISH trawlermen are as tough in body as they are in spirit.

Skipper Ward, of the steam trawler Saloon, proves it.

He has just come out of hospital, where a piece of his spine had to be cut away to enable a German machine gun bullet to be removed.

The Saloon was fishing in the North Sea when a Heinkel bomber flew low over the trawler and raked the decks with machine-gun fire.

The Saloon Lewis gunner opened fire and the skipper seized a rifle and joined in the fight.

After making four attacks and dropping bombs the Heinkel was badly hit and made off in distress.

The Saloon went on fishing.

Next afternoon two Nazi seaplanes attacked her, but the crew returned fire, and the planes were driven off.

But Skipper Ward and his Lewis gunner had been wounded, so they then hauled up their gear and made for home.

And the skipper remained on his feet until his ship was in harbour.

He told the News Chronicle: "When I heard the King's speech I bent it to join up. I left a good job, a good wife and three kids for £6 a day, but I don't regret it."

Smith has not seen his mother or father for 27 years. They live at Benson House, Hatfield, London.

Private T. J. O'Shea, a veteran of the last war, declared: "There are thousands more waiting to get over. Recruiting is unnecessary."

charm amulets and "one-thousand stitch" belts.

THE skill and personal bravery of our officers are the principal factors that make up for our numerical inferiority. In engagements with hostile planes our officers often fight against great odds. Some times they can shoot down enemy planes after their own planes have been already damaged.

The names of some of our best air officers and their achievements in shooting down enemy planes follow.

Capt. Liu Jui-kwang shot down 7 hostile planes; Captains Kwang Hsin-jui, Liu Chung-wu, Chen Jui-tien, each claim 6 hostile planes and Captains Mao Yin-chu, Hwang Fei-yung, Chu Chin-hsun and Lo I-ching, each 5 planes.

In this connection, I may recall several deeds of heroism and self-sacrifice on the part of our officers. While on an expedition to attack the enemy positions in Shanghai in 1937, 2nd Lieut. Yen Hai-wen made a forced landing in the enemy lines after having acquitted himself very creditably in the bombing mission. He calmly jumped out from his cockpit, carefully destroyed his plane and shot him to capture him before he took his own life with the last bullet in his service pistol. In the Japanese press a high tribute was paid to their fallen foe and as far as we understand, the Japanese gave him a decent burial and dedicated a stone tablet to his memory. 1st Lieut. Sheng Chung-sun sank an enemy naval vessel in the Hangchow Bay by crashing his bomb-laden plane on her deck. While fighting single-handed with a number of enemy pursuits in an air combat near Hankow 1st Lieut. Chen Wei-ming found his plane so much damaged that he could no longer carry on the fight. He made straight for the nearest enemy fighter. The collision destroyed both planes and killed the crews. Colonel Wu Ju-lin, at the head of a pursuit squadron, wiped out an enemy bombing squadron near Nanyang. Our aerial attacks on enemy warships have also scored many successes. Up to the present our bombers have hit a total of 104 enemy vessels of which 40 were sunk.

Britain The "Enemy"

Nazi Germany regards the British Empire as her greatest enemy, and at the heart of that enemy she will strike with every means at her command.

Attempts may be made at invasion by sea passage. But no experience in the present war have gone to prove that powerful warships can be driven off the sea by direct air attack; the U-boat is far from being a decisive factor in naval operations; and the Germans have no fleet in being that could challenge the sea power of Britain, let alone the combined strength of the Allied fleets. In face of this Germany could not land forces of adequate strength on the British coast, although this hazardous adventure may be attempted. The more hopeful plan would be infiltration in small craft to disorganize Britain's war effort. But the invasion of the British Isles by air, to the greatest possible extent, has now been brought within the range of practical operations. With this there would follow the intensive bombing attack, for which this country has long been prepared. The Germans would rely on a combination of Fifth Column activities, parachute troops and troop-carrying aircraft.

The Fifth Column, the British Government, among other precautions, has rounded up all aliens, whether suspect or not, and Nazi sympathisers wherever they may be. In view of the deadly Fifth Column work in Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium, and France, and Nazi activities in every surviving neutral country within range, it would be criminal to run the risk of what a diabolically cunning secret enemy could do, with his plans for sabotage already laid, and with hidden weapons to his hand.

The Germans are singularly good at exploiting the ideas of others—take, for example, was a British invention—and their military authorities were so impressed by the mass parachute descents and troop-carrying aircraft at the Soviet manoeuvres of 1935 that they adopted this technique.

German parachute troops are organised in battalions that are carefully trained in their specialized duties.

Officially their uniform is the German Air Force blue-grey but the men may be disguised—not infrequently in the uniform of the country attacked. A steel helmet like a motorist's crash-helmet, respirator, hand grenades, a gun firing 600 rounds a minute, and perhaps a collapsible bicycle, are their essential equipment.

Company equipment, dropped in special containers with self-opening parachutes after the men had landed, includes ammunition and rifles, field glasses, compasses, spades, smoke candles and wire.

The battalion auxiliary weapons are the 3-inch mountain gun, medium and light mortars, heavy and light machine guns and machine gun pistols.

Parachute attack is preceded if possible by air reconnaissance. When the parachutists descend 50 feet from their slow-moving planes, it is supposed to be possible for a company to land within an area of about 220 yards by 440, and assemble within a quarter of an hour.

Their functions are to seize aerodromes, power stations, railway junctions and telephone exchanges, and either make these useless or hold them to reinforce their arrival, possibly in answer to their signals. To these activities are added the creation of panic and spread-

CHINESE AIR FORCE

As the Sino-Japanese hostilities enter their fourth year, the public may be interested to know the part played by the Chinese air force.

It is generally admitted that numerically the Japanese air force is overwhelmingly superior to ours.

To a neutral observer it is nothing short of a miracle that we have been able to fight at all successfully in the air against such colossal odds for the past three years and continue to fight with vigour.

THE Chinese air force is of recent creation, dating back hardly half a dozen years.

It was only in 1934 that the squadrons attached to the provincial armies were brought to the fold of the Central Government and placed under one command. Under the able leadership of General

Issimo Chiang

various flying units were systematically organised, rigid

strong sense of duty were inspired into every one in the force.

So what we lack in personnel and equipment is made up by the skill superior morale of our officers who have found expression in numerous engagements with the enemy.

The air warfare in the present

Sino-Japanese hostilities may be divided into four phases. The first phase covered the period from the

battle to the fall of Nanking, the second from the fall of Nanking to the battle of Taierschwang, the third from the fall of Hsuehchow to the fall of the Wu-Han cities and the fourth from the fall of the Wu-Han cities

The First Phase

AT the very beginning of the hostilities, Japanese military leaders were under the delusion that they could wipe out the Chinese air force in a few weeks.

As soon as the war broke out the Japanese high command sent bombing squadrons from their bases

at Formosa and Canton Island to

Nanchang and Nanking. In these expeditions the enemy soon found that they had greatly underestimated the strength of their opponent.

Japan's first attempt at bombing our base resulted in a stunning blow at Hangchow where eight of her thirteen heavy bombers were shot down on August 14, 1937, the day following the outbreak of the Shanghai hostilities.

A bombing expedition to Nanking on August 15 fared no better. Of the 20 bombers that started from

Formosa ten failed to return to their base. On that day hostility bombers were also brought down by us at other places, and the total of the day's "bag" was over 30 heavy bombers. In three weeks

the Kisharazu and the Kanoya

Air Corps, each consisting of about 60 heavy bombers, were practically wiped out by us. The enemy relaxed in September and for three weeks Nanking was free from air alarms. Instead of day-bombing they resorted to night raids, and their bombers did not appear in broad daylight without a strong escort of pursuists.

Our first bombing expeditions were sent out on August 14 to attack the hostile warships in the

Yangtze Estuary and the Hangchow

Bay and at the same time to bomb enemy trenches and military depots

in Shanghai. One of the subsequent expeditions was carried out on the night of September 16 when the Kunda Cotton Mill in which the headquarters of the Japanese troops were housed was bombed. As a result, the enemy sustained material losses as well as heavy casualties in personnel.

In the course of the Shanghai fighting the enemy, finding it difficult to make any advance on the Shanghai front, turned their attention to the northern theatre of war where their forces were greatly strengthened in September in the hope of taking Taiyuan to recou-per for the losses at Shanghai. To meet the requirements of our ground troops on the northern front, we despatched a number of squadrons to Shanai, where our pursuits fought successfully with

Yanglinggao and Taiyuan.

Our bombers made several attacks on the enemy positions at Tatum

ing false news.

The German military junkers 89

and the civil Junkers 89 can carry 40 fully equipped men at a cruising speed of 200 miles an hour. It was the landing of thousands of men in parachutes, and not the parachute factor in Holland. But it remains to be seen whether these unwieldy machines can penetrate the highly organised British anti-aircraft de-

and troop trains on the northern section of the Peiping-Hankow Railway. A part of our air force was stationed at Canton to patrol the southern sea coast, where we sunk three enemy naval craft by aerial attack. These activities on the part of the Chinese air force marked the first phase of the air war.

The Second Phase

AFTER the fall of Nanking the scene of hostilities gradually shifted to the southern section of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and the enemy advanced on Hsuehchow from North and South.

With greater air base facilities as the result of occupation of our airfields on the sea coast, the strength of the Japanese air force operating in this country was greatly increased.

which took the enemy unawares. During this period we carried out, besides our "good-will mission" to Japan in May, bombing expeditions to the following places: Nanking, Wuhu, Kwangchow, Hainkow, Hainshiang and Pengpu, at each of which places Japanese air fields were bombed.

The enemy's warships at Tikon, Lukong, Kweichih and Tunglu in the Yangtze and aircraft carriers in Canton waters were subject to repeated air attacks. We also assailed enemy troop positions, artillery emplacements, railway stations and bridges and troop trains at fourteen different places in Anwei, Shanai and Honan. Our air force also took part in the battle of Taierschwang.

As for the operations of our pursuists, in January, 1938, we brought down three heavy bombers at Nanchang. At Hainkow, our airmen in a combat with the enemy on February 18, 1938 shot down eleven raiders. Our pursuists patrolling the southern section of the Canton-Hankow Railway encountered enemy planes near Canton on April 13, 1938, and brought down eight of their 18 pursuists that constituted the escort of a bombing squadron.

APRIL 29, the birthday of the Japanese Emperor, by the irony of fate, has also become a red-letter day in the calendar of the Chinese air force.

In 1938 the enemy celebrated the Emperor's birthday by sending a large number of planes to attack Hainkow. These heavy bombers, escorted by pursuists, made their appearance above the Wuhu cities early that afternoon.

After an engagement of more than an hour with the raiders we "bagged" a total of 21 planes—11 pursuists and 10 heavy bombers. This was confirmed by the discovery of the wrecks on the spot.

It is, however, believed that the enemy's losses were much heavier. According to a Shanghai press report, 35 of the planes failed to return to their base. In this engagement our losses were four planes destroyed and three men wounded.

On May 31, 1938, the Japanese made another attempt to attack Hainkow from the air with a fleet of 60 planes: 39 pursuists and 21 heavy bombers. They were met by our pursuists, and after an hour's engagement, 13 hostile planes lay wrecked at different places in the neighbourhood of the Wu-Han cities. We lost three planes with one man killed and one wounded.

Other air combats during this period included two engagements above Kweichih, on March 25 and April 10 and those above Loyang and Changsha.

The Third Phase

AFTER the fall of Hsuehchow the enemy advanced on Hainkow by land and water.

In June 1938, they captured Ankang, and a fortnight later the forts at Matang fell into their hands. The enemy made Nanking and Wuhu their principal air bases, from which squadrons of heavy bombers were daily sent out to bombard Hainkow, Nanchang and Hengyang.

Our air force was equally active. Every day we despatched bombing squadrons to attack the enemy warships and transports in the Yangtze and their lines of communications in the rear. Raids on enemy aerodromes at Nanking, Wuhu and Ankang were occasionally made.

As a result, 33 naval vessels in the Yangtze were sunk, and 100 others damaged and a great number of airplanes destroyed on the ground. A series of air combats were fought at Matang, Hainkow, Yengyang, Kunming and Hainyang in each of which losses were inflicted on the enemy.

In one of the raids on Namyang in June, a squadron of six hostile heavy bombers were shot down by us and in August, eight enemy planes were destroyed when they attempted to bomb the southern section of the Canton-Hankow Railway. In September and Octo-her our bombers were busy with ground strafing and bombing of enemy artillery emplacements at Yanghsing, Lushan and Hainyang.

The Fourth Phase

DURING 1939 our air force, like our army, was greatly strengthened and a new strategy and new tactics were accordingly adopted.

In both our offensive and defensive moves, better results were achieved. With regard to the activities of our bombers, expeditions were sent to Yunching, the enemy advance air base in the northern theatre of war, on February 5 and April 2 and 20. On October 3 and 14 we attacked the Hainkow aerodrome, the chief Japanese air base in Central China.

On the latter two occasions we destroyed more than 80 planes on the ground in addition to shooting down several pursuists in the air. The other losses sustained by the Japanese included over 50 military trucks, 5,000 gallons of gasoline and some ammunition dumps.

Our pursuists also gave a good account of themselves in a number of combats with air raiders. In the engagements with hostile planes at Lanchow on February 20 and 23, fifteen heavy bombers of Type No. 97 and Flat BF-20 were brought down and 63 air-men were killed.

Among the crew killed were one squadron leader and two others holding the rank of captain. The material losses sustained by the Japanese were estimated at U.S.$10,000,000. On April 20 two Japanese pursuists of Type No. 97 were shot down at Hancheng (Hanchung) and on May 3 seven heavy bombers of Type No. 97 were destroyed at Chungking.

On November 4 our pursuists attacked a fleet of 54 hostile heavy bombers above Chengtu. It was believed that at least five of the air raiders were brought down but so far the wrecks of only three have been discovered. Among the 18 dead who formed the crews of the ill-starred bombers, were a Japanese Naval Captain who was supposed to be a Japanese air ace, one squadron leader and another Japanese air officer holding the rank of Captain. The losses inflicted on the enemy were heavy as those killed represented the cream of the Japanese air force.

In this connection it may also be mentioned that on February 2, 1939, we brought down a Japanese heavy bomber, a Flat BF-20, at Shanyang.

Among the crew of six persons there was one Watanabe, Chief Armourer of the Japanese Air Force Headquarters, holding the rank of Naval Captain and one Lieut. Commander Fujida, who had established a world distance record of close combat.

The close of 1939 was marked by a series of air raids on Lanchow. As a result of combats on December 26, 27 and 28 we brought down ten heavy bombers. We celebrated the New Year of 1940 with a number of successful air raids on Japanese trenches, troop concentrations, motor transport columns and ammunition dumps at Nanning and its vicinity. Our attack on the Nanning aerodrome resulted in the destruction of eleven enemy planes on the ground, and our pursuists brought down one Japanese heavy bomber and ten pursuists in a series of encounters at Kweichih, Luchow and Kunlungkwan. On New Year's Day of 1940 one of the latest Japanese observation planes was brought down at Lining. The enemy's air raids on Mengtze on February 1, 3, 13 and 17 resulted in the loss of three heavy bombers of Type No. 96 which were brought down by our pursuists. In the past two months our bombers were also active. The notable expeditions they carried out were the attack on the enemy air base at Yuncheng on April 3, and on the enemy military depots, field headquarters, motor transport columns and advance air fields at Yoyang, Hainyang and Chungshang and enemy naval crafts in the Tungting Lake.

These aerial activities formed a prelude to the recent victory of our ground forces in northern Hupeh and southern Honan.

Our anti-aircraft units came in for a share of the achievements in our air defence. They gave a good account of themselves in the present war. The following instances will illustrate the effectiveness of our anti-aircraft fire.

On September 20, 1937, the Japanese sent 90 light bombers to bombard Nanking in four successive waves. In the first raid five raiders were brought down by one anti-aircraft fire, and at the end of the day our ground batteries had "bagged" a total of 12 planes. Once a flight of three air raiders were brought down by one shot, when a bomb-laden plane was set on fire by a direct hit and the explosion of its tank destroyed the other two. This occurred at Kintan on November 27, 1937. On the night of October 10, 1938, Japanese raiders bombed Hengyang in five successive waves during which six raiders were shot down by our anti-aircraft fire. Our ground batteries also played a significant part in the defence of the important railways such as the Tientsin-Pukow and Peiping-Hankow Railways during the first stage of the war. The presence of anti-aircraft batteries at the various important railway junctions prevented enemy bombers from low-altitude flying and rendered their aerial attacks ineffective. The precautions we take against air raids have proven adequate. The countless attacks on our people by the enemy would have inflicted far more appalling losses on our civilian life and property had not such precautions been taken.

AS a result of the past three years' air operations, we destroyed up to April 30, 1940, a total of 848 enemy planes which have been confirmed by the discovery of the wrecks or by information from reliable sources.

The enemy planes lost due to accidents or other causes and those damaged by us but dropped behind the enemy's lines are not included. If the latter item is also taken into account, the total exceeds one thousand. Of the 848 planes reported to be brought down by our pursuists, 253 were destroyed on the ground by aerial attacks and the rest were shot down by our anti-aircraft batteries and other military units. Altogether we have buried 1,055 dead Japanese airmen in addition to taking 51 prisoners. Forty-two Japanese airmen who came to the ground with their planes are missing. It is believed that the enemy's loss in personnel is much heavier by reason of the fact that among their planes destroyed there is a fairly high percentage of heavy bombers each of which accommodates a crew of seven.

When an enemy plane was damaged, its crew usually attempted to save their lives by parachute jumping. In most cases they succeeded in reaching the ground without a scratch, though some of the unfortunate ones were badly burned or otherwise wounded. The 51 prisoners we have captured are now quartered in comfortable camps, well-fed, well-clothed and well-cared for. The monthly food allowance for the prisoners compares favourably with our own officers' mess bills.

The prisoners are allowed to enjoy such simple luxuries as cigarettes, which are distributed among them according to their rank. The officers are better treated. Stationery, books and newspapers are provided for them. With the exception of the daily physical exercise which is compulsory, the prisoners are free to devise means for their own recreation and amusement. Among the captured Japanese airmen are one Lieut.-Commander, and one 1st Lieutenant of the Japanese Navy. Most of the others are non-commissioned officers and first airmen. Japanese air crews as a rule are very superstitious. On the bodies of their dead, we find

Daylight Attacks On Nazi Concentrations

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—An Air Ministry communique states:

"Yesterday R.A.F. bombers made daylight attacks on concentrations of enemy forces on Dutch canals at Zwille, Hatten and West, and also near Elbers and Deft. Many of the barges were sunk, wrecked or set on fire.

"Other aircraft bombed an enemy supply ship in the Danish harbour of Salborg.

"Our bombers also attacked aerodromes in enemy occupied territory, at Solsons and Douai. Aircraft, personnel and transport were damaged.

"Aircraft of the Coastal Command attacked and damaged enemy patrol vessels off the Danish coast. All our aircraft returned safely.

"Last night R.A.F. bombers attacked naval bases at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, where damage was done to dockyards and an enemy warship was set on fire.

"Further damage was done to oil refineries at Hamburg and a goods yard at Hamm.

"Aerodromes at Wealhaven, Amsterdam and Brussels were also bombed. One of our aircraft is missing.

Borgon Raided
"This morning a formation of our bombers attacked Borgon, where an ammunition dump was set on fire and damage was done to a ship and a seaplane slipway.

"Another formation of R.A.F. bombers attacked aircraft lined up on the Sola aerodrome at Stavanger. The attack was pressed home in the face of strong opposition from enemy fighters and ground defences. One enemy fighter was shot down.

"Seven of our aircraft failed to return.

Danish Coast Attacks
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Enemy shipping off the Danish coast was attacked by Coastal Command aircraft to-day, states the Air Ministry news service.

Two large minesweepers were trying to clear a part of the minefield when a patrolling Hudson bombed the leading mine-sweeper. The explosion lifted the vessel's bows.

Another Hudson followed up a dive-bombing attack on an enemy supply ship with machine-gun fire and the ship was seen settling down by the stern.

A few miles away, a second vessel was also machine-gunned and smoke was seen rising from amidships.

Attack On Stavanger
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—The report of a bomber pilot who returned from an attack on Stavanger aerodrome is issued by the Air Ministry news service.

The report says: "Each of the three aircraft in my flight dropped its bombs but there was no opportunity to observe the result owing to the need to take and avoid enemy action."

"The report of my flight had most of its bombs blown away, presumably by anti-aircraft fire.

Attacked By 30
"On leaving the target, about 30 enemy aircraft were attacking us. My port aircraft was shot down in flames as was also the aircraft on the starboard side. The engine of my aircraft and oil tank were hit by cannon fire, the engine died and the aircraft dropped off.

"The attack by enemy aircraft lasted for over 30 minutes. I made a forced landing when the undercarriage jammed in a 'up' position. All the hydraulic system had been put out of action during the fight with the enemy."

"My air observer shot down one Messerschmitt and possibly damaged several others. The rear gunner damaged one Messerschmitt."

Appeal For U.S. Help

Herbert Morrison
Broadcasts

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Broadcasting to-night, Mr. Herbert Morrison, the Minister of Supply, said:

"Our confidence in our ability, not merely to hold off a Nazi attack, but ultimately to master it, is partly the measure of our confidence in America's readiness to aid her great resources to our own for the destruction of that which menaces her no less surely."

"We Are Inspired"
"We are inspired by the sight of America awake and preparing. Against the material strength of the European continent organised for aggression, there is only one sure industrial counterforce, and that is to be founded on the capacity of Britain and the United States."

OPPOSITION TO PURCHASE TAX

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—A National Council of Labour meeting to-night unanimously expressed opposition to the purchase tax on the ground that it would impose an unfair burden on the poorer section of the community.

Grenoble, July 9 (UP).—The French Chamber, by a vote of 385 to 3 adopted the resolution granting full powers to Marshal Petain.

Mr. A. V. Alexander Dramatically Tells Of— HOW THE FRENCH FLEET WAS DESTROYED

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Mr. A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, asked by private notice at question time to make a statement on the naval situation, was received with cheers as he rose in the House of Commons to say: "The House will remember that on July 4 the Prime Minister described the painful but very necessary action which had been taken the previous day to prevent units of the French fleet lying in British and north African ports from passing into enemy control."

"Since then the Royal Navy has carried out two further operations designed to increase the security of this country against the use of French warships by the enemy."

"On July 6, a French battle cruiser of the Dunkirk class which had been damaged and driven ashore at Oran was attacked by aircraft and the fleet air arm, which obtained six hits. As a result, this powerful ship will be incapable of effective use for a very long time."

The Affair At Dakar
"Apart from ships thus dealt with, there lay at Dakar, in French West Africa, the 35,000-ton battleship Richelieu which had just been completed and was the most modern and formidable capital ship in the world, and was immediately available for active operations."

"In accordance with the decision announced to the House by the Prime Minister, His Majesty's Government decided that steps must also be taken to ensure that this vessel did not fall into enemy hands in a condition in which she could be used against us."

"A force was accordingly despatched to Dakar in order to prevent the French Admiral with three proposals similar to those offered to the French commander at Oran. On July 7, a flag-officer was entrusted with this operation, and he sent one of his captains ahead in a sloop in order to present the terms in person. On arrival this ship was informed by the French authorities that they would open fire if she approached closer to port, and it was only after an interval that the French consented to receive this communication by signal."

Four Terms Offered
Mr. Alexander here recapitulated the alternatives offered to the Admiral at Dakar, which he thought desirable in view of the statements which were made by the French Government concerning the terms offered at Oran.

"These were four in number," continued Mr. Alexander. "No satisfactory reply was received within the necessary time limit, nevertheless, the British naval officer in charge waited longer before carrying out his orders to use force."

"Finally, as it became clear that the French authorities did not propose to accede to any of the British suggestions, he had no alternative but to carry out his painful duty in the early hours of July 8."

"The attack upon the Richelieu was two-fold.

"A ship's boat under the command of Lieut. Commander R. E. I. Bristol was sent into the harbour carrying depth charges. With great carrying the boat successfully passed the boom and went alongside the port quarter of the Richelieu. At the right moment, the depth charges were dropped close under the stern of the warship, as she lay at anchor in shallow water, in order to damage her propeller and steering gear."

"The boat was then withdrawn immediately after dropping the depth charges." (Laughter and cheers), "but while still in the harbour broke down and lay helpless for a time."

"The crew, however, succeeded in getting one engine running just as they were discovered and the boat, which was pursued, managed to escape by crossing the harbour defence nets which then fouled its pursuer." (laughter and cheers).

"I am sure the House will join with me in paying tribute to the gallantry and skill with which the operation was carried out. I think it must be obvious to the House that whoever undertook an operation like that ran the risk the whole time of blowing himself up."

Main Air Attack
"The main attack was entrusted to aircraft of the Fleet air arm, and took place after the attack by the motor boat. These aircraft were successful with their torpedoes, a number of which hit the Richelieu."

"The motor boat which was still in the harbour witnessed the aircraft attack and heard five explosions, then saw smoke issuing from the battleship. Air reconnaissance since carried out has established that the Richelieu has a list to port, and is down by the stern. A large quantity of oil covered the water around the ship."

"All our aircraft returned safely in spite of heavy anti-aircraft fire."

"It would desire, as I am sure you would, to pay tribute to the skill and efficiency and courage with which this action was carried out by the officers and men concerned." (cheers).

What French Have Lost
"The House will appreciate the result of this painful action which we had to take. When France signed the armistice she had eight capital ships left to form a line of battle under present conditions. Three of the Richelieu and Gambet classes have now passed under our control. One has been sunk, one badly damaged and immobilised."

"Of the two modern battle-cruisers, one has been driven ashore at Oran and will be out of action for a long time to come, and not permanently."

The other, managed, as the Prime Minister told the House, to escape and is presumed to have reached Toulon, but, only after having been

NEW AIR BATTLE OVER S. E. COAST

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—An air battle took place over south-east England this afternoon.

As soon as the enemy aircraft crossed the coast from the north-east, they were engaged by fighters out of sight in the clouds.

Rapid machine-gun bursts were frequent and spent cartridges came down like hail over a town.

Raiders Driven Off
British fighters attacked the raiders and finally drove them off to the south.

A south-west town had a daylight raid in the afternoon when a single bomber dropped bombs. The extent of the damage is not known. The raiders flew fairly low and were hotly attacked by guns.

Another raider from a higher altitude dropped bombs which fell in a field.

At least two were killed and a few injured in an air raid in a Welsh area this afternoon.

Four Nazis Downed
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—It is officially announced that two enemy bombers and one fighter were destroyed by British fighters and one enemy fighter by anti-aircraft fire in enemy bombing attacks on several districts in England to-day.

An Air Ministry communique announcing this states that enemy aircraft made bombing attacks in several districts. Some damage was done to premises at a Bristol Channel port and a few casualties were caused.

Fighter aircraft and anti-aircraft guns went into action and losses were inflicted on the enemy.

More Raids
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—There were more enemy raids in eastern England and Scotland on Monday night and early this morning.

High explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped but there was practically no damage of any casualties caused.

A.R.P. headquarters dealt efficiently with incendiary bombs which fell on a south-east town.

Nine German planes appeared over south-east Scotland this morning. One plane is reported to have been so badly damaged by our defences that it is unlikely that it got home again.

Houses and a stable were damaged in a Scottish town. Some windows were broken.

There were a few minor casualties.

Casualties
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—There were a number of casualties including several dead, in a raid on a south-east England town to-night.

It is believed that the death-roll in south-west England in a daylight raid to-day was six, and several people were treated for minor injuries.

ITALIANS LOSE SUPPLIES

CAIRO, July 9 (Reuter).—Tonight's war communique states: "In the Western Desert, successful engagements continue on enemy columns trying to take stores and water into the fort of Capuzzo, causing a daily drain on the enemy's resources, particularly mechanical transport."

hit by a torpedo, which will immobilise her for some time.

"The state of the Richelieu has been described this afternoon. There remains in addition, only the sister ship of the Richelieu—the Jean Bart—which will not, however, be complete for operational service for some months to come."

Position At Alexandria
ALEXANDRIA, July 9 (Reuter).—Further details of the statement issued by the British naval authorities regarding the French Fleet at Alexandria are available.

The statement adds: "On their part the British Government have guaranteed the supplies and pay of the French crews remaining and also their return to France at the end of the war."

"This is how matters stand at present. It is hoped that these conditions may continue."

"In the Eastern Mediterranean, the terrible events of which we all know have been avoided and the best hope is that our good relations here may continue as before."

"Our only wish throughout, has been to make sure that Italians and Germans should not possess French ships in order to use them against the British, who are still fighting on to defeat Germany and Italy, and to re-establish France."

LETTERS

Police Reservists—Appeal To Employers

To The Editor.
The "Hongkong Telegraph."

Sir,—I shall be much obliged if you will kindly allow me to draw the attention of all employers concerned to revised arrangements for duties of Police Reservists. As from Thursday July 11, members of the Reserve have been detailed for six hours duty daily—a tour of three hours between 7 a.m. and noon, and a tour of three hours between 6 p.m. and midnight. It is hoped that this arrangement will enable Reservists to continue in their civil employment.

I would request the sympathetic co-operation of employers to enable Reservists to carry out their orders.

T. H. KING,
Commissioner of Police.

The Rent Problem
Sir,—I wish to express my views on a subject in which I feel sure that many residents of Hongkong are very seriously concerned. First I would like to make it clear that this letter is not written with any spirit of criticism of the Government, who have hardly had time to deal with the question of leases and other forms of agreement between landlord and tenant, but to ensure that my reasoning on this matter will be brought promptly to the attention of all to whom the public look for justice.

For reasons which will be obvious, I must use a "nom de plume" and I cannot give precise details of my own case.

Immediately on being introduced as a prospective tenant, the rental of the accommodation I now occupy was increased from a very high figure to a very excessive one, which force of circumstances compelled me to accept.

I was then called upon to place my signature to certain terms which included one to the effect that I would give one calendar month's notice of my quitting the premises. My landlord has intimated that he is not yet prepared to discuss the matter of a reduction in rent and that any consequent decision to quit must be covered by one month's notice commencing on the 1st day of the month at the end of which I intend to quit.

The obvious intention of the landlord is to squeeze the exorbitant rental from the tenant for July and August at least, or possibly on the 31st of July to make a small unacceptable reduction in rental in the hope that the tenant would be too late to tender a written notice to quit at the end of August under the one-sided agreement (the landlord himself signed nothing).

In the first place the landlord was (and still is) profiting through war which results in an index of wages. The Government's recent action (which undoubtedly is very wise) has created special circumstances (resulting from war) in which the tenant should be relieved of his obligation as regards notice to the landlord. Emergency regulations are enforced to protect war contingencies, and so the law should now be revised to meet the emergency situation created by Government itself whereby men with families are left, I believe, with legal obligations to their landlords which are inequitable in view of tenants' obligations to their families, who must be provided with a home elsewhere.

The tenant now has full justification for appealing for emergency regulations to release him from agreements which may hold good in normal times. I suggest 75 per cent. of June rentals for July and one week's notice to quit provided emergency regulations are passed and announced by the 24th July.

Whilst on this subject I would like to point out that a landlord netting a return of, say, five per cent. on a house worth $105 house a few years ago would be making ten times that profit on the same house now.

Food Control regulations rightly present increases in profit on food-stuffs, so the landlords have had a deal. Both houses and food are enforced to meet war contingencies and I hope Government will do something to put things on a more equitable basis.

TENANT.

ITALIAN THREATS

Gayda Still Riding The High Horse

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—The breakdown of the Franco-British Alliance can make no difference to Italian and German claims on France, declares the "Giornale d'Italia."

"The breakdown cannot modify the conditions that France created with regard to the Axis powers by her past policy and military action."

"The conquered nation remains as such with her political debts to Italy and Germany, and the changing of European policy cannot change the responsibilities of France, which will have to satisfy Italian and German demands," says the paper.

Gets Ailoli Ready
Referring to Italian action against Britain, the "Giornale d'Italia" speaks of the "complex tasks of the Italian forces who will have to face British naval forces in the Mediterranean, the Red Sea, Indian Ocean and the Atlantic, while the air and land forces will have to combat the British on the frontiers of Libyan East Africa."

The official Silefian agency, in a Berlin dispatch, gives comments from the "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung" following similar lines and declaring that France cannot evade responsibilities by adopting a form of government similar to her adversaries. "The French experiment has come too late for the European settlement will be undertaken solely by Italy and Germany," says the journal.

Axis Blockade Aims
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—According to a German news agency dispatch to the "Giornale d'Italia," the various problems raised by the Axis aim "to pursue the war to final victory against Britain and its imperial forces" have been distributed among the two Axis Powers in complete agreement.

Each Power has been allotted its task, the object of which "is to close the blockade round England and cut it off from the imperial sources of supply and to meet and vanquish it on home and overseas territory as well as at sea."

Channel Is. Abandonment
Government's Action Defended

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Viscount Simon replied to criticisms regarding the evacuation of the Channel Islands in the House of Lords to-day.

Lord Simon said that "this lamentable and distressing event" was a totally isolated case due to the geographical position of the Islands close to the shores of France. It did not form any sort of precedent for any part of the United Kingdom.

Not To Be Repeated
The Government had no intention of abandoning any fortified position in any of the Dominions of the United Kingdom.

The Bailiffs of Jersey and Guernsey were continuing to carry on to the best of their power in the civil administration, for which they were responsible.

If, by withdrawing from the Islands, the small garrison these people were freed from a terrible and continuous air bombardment, it would be a small compensation for the loss and distress they felt at the temporary separation from their homes.

"I trust the day is not far distant when we may have among our triumphs the supreme satisfaction of seeing that these good people are returned to their homes," said Lord Simon.

FRESH HAZARDS FOR GOLFERS

(By "Birdie")

SNAKES ARE BEGINNING to offer fresh hazards at the Country Club, Sheungshiu, and in the interests of golfers there I made a few enquiries from our nature expert about the reptiles. Rain, it seems, has driven them out of their holes and nests, and I can sympathise with the snakes to a certain extent in their apprehension over drowning. I paddled down the course last Sunday and only touched dry ground when I reached the greens.

Over twenty seven inches of rain fell during June and the few days of July to date. Twenty-five of those inches, I should say, are still just below the surface and the other two on top.

However, returning to snakes. Most golfers must, at one time or another, have come across these pleasant little companions, and, no doubt, have been instrumental in their destruction, for unless one really knows what one is dealing with it is best to be on the safe side.

At the Country Club there appears to be mainly two kinds—(1) a harmless rat and frog killer, and (2) a grass viper that is deadly. I killed one of each kind last Sunday with the intention of bringing them back for identification. I stored them snugly in one of the cups on the practice green and then forgot all about them. However, I expect and hope the green-keeper found them.

The first of these two snakes is a blackish-grey in colour on its back and sides, and is whitish underneath. This is the harmless one—or so I was told when I described it. The second is a distinct but dull green with a slender tapering head. Against the fairways they are fairly difficult to detect, and I doubt if they would be seen if they did not move. This, I am told, is the dangerous viper. It is comparatively small—I haven't seen one over 18 inches long—but is also comparatively brave.

The harmless fellow will slide away, or try to, when the viper approaches; perhaps, unlike the viper, it knows it is without any offensive weapon. These grow to quite some size. I have seen one about four feet long.

But the little grass viper took several stabs at my driver before I knocked him out. Note the use of the driver—it is the longest club in the bag.

I don't know what trouble they have at the Royal Hongkong Golf Club with snakes, but at the Kowloon Golf Club and the Country Club, they are rare. Record "bag" at Sheungshiu last autumn was four in a day.

THE rain that drove the snakes out lies deep on the course. Casual water and plugged balls are a stroke by stroke occurrence. The 8th green is unplayable and has been for the past five weeks, while the 1st, 2nd and 3rd fairways are in valleys and retain enough water to keep an army several weeks in a desert.

A little more of this weather and I am afraid that all the grass on the course will be drowned—if it isn't already.

IN talking of snakes as fresh hazards out here, consider the new obstacles that litter the courses at home. To prevent enemy landings by aeroplane, trenches are being dug and have been dug across fairways, and other hazards in the shape of old tractors, rollers and lorries have been strewn about the approaches on long holes.

One golf club has gone so far as to plant unused railway sleepers upright for the whole length of holes of 300 yards or more. While yet another oddity is the placing of a strong wire across the fairway three feet above the ground. This, it is said, is sufficient to overturn any landing plane.

War-time golfers might find that these add further spice to the game though I doubt if there is much time to spare for golf over there at the moment.

OTHER golf news from home is that Edinburgh University have retained the Scottish Inter-University Women's golf championship by defeating St. Andrews 7 matches to 3, with one match halved.

This was played over the Eden course, St. Andrews.

The holders were successful in four of the forenoon singles, and won all foursomes in the afternoon.

Previously, Edinburgh defeated Glasgow 10-2, while St. Andrews beat the same University 11-1. Aberdeen did not enter a team.

Max West's home run in the fifth inning, bringing in two other batters, started the National League's run to victory. The other run was tallied in the eighth.

Tennis Star Joins Royal Air Force

Murray Delofoord, one of our youngest and brightest lawn tennis stars, is the newest sporting recruit to the Royal Air Force. He has joined as an A/C 2, but has to get a commission in the near future.

Delofoord's entry into the ranks of the R.A.F. means that all but the first two and the last two of the official L.T.A. ranking list have now joined up.

It is said that a young player of such talent as Delofoord should have his career so rudely interrupted at such an important phase.

After winning the British Junior Championship at the age of 17, he quickly made his mark in senior tennis, and the following year recorded a creditable victory over V. G. Kirby. This year it seemed touch-and-go whether he would get a place in our Davis Cup team.

He was passed over, but, undaunted, went on to show what he could at Wimbledon by a fine win over D. Minto. The Yugoslavian Davis Cup player—only to meet his Waterloo in the next round at the hands of F. Kukuljevic, also of Yugoslavia. As the Yugoslavian Davis Cup team won the European Zone final against Germany this was not such bad form.

succeeded the late Mr. H. Gullen as secretary. Mr. Gullen is well-known in many parts of the world, and has been R. and A. secretary for the past 28 years. As Britain's ambassador of golf he travelled extensively in charge of many international teams, and accompanied the Walker Cup teams to America.

That the British Amateur and Professional Championships have become among the most popular and esteemed competitions of the world has been credited to his organising ability.

His successor, however, has also had much experience in the organising of championships, and the future of the Club is confidently left in his capable hands.

COUNTY CRICKET

London Counties Defeat Cheam And Guildford Surrey Beat Richmond

LONDON COUNTIES and two British Empire XIs featured in four of the five matches recently played at Home, Surrey, in the remaining game, beating Richmond by 30 runs. The latter game was marked by a lively innings of 55 by P. G. H. Fender.

Century For Hulme

LONDON COUNTIES, in a one-day match passed Cheam's total for the loss of 4 wickets, had for their top scorer Joe Hulme. The Middlesex cricketer reached his century in 30 minutes and got 7 sixes. Best strokes of Eastman were a six and 8 fours, while Fagg hit 9 fours.

Cheam lost four men for 12 and then recovered as the result of good batting by Randall and Ryder, who got most of his runs by cutting and leg hitting. When tried a second time, Durston took the last three wickets with 12 balls for 3 runs.

COUNCIL OFFICIAL DROVE FATAL CAR

The driver of a non-stop car which fatally injured a woman at Howick, near Preston, on the night of April 5 was disclosed at the inquest recently as Mr. Charles Smith, Lancaster Corporation transport manager, of Rosemoynce-road, Scotforth, Lancaster. The dead woman was Mrs. Lavinia Jackson, aged 38, of Howick. Evidence was given by Mrs. Maggie Wint, of the Mason's Arms, St. James's-street, Burnley, that she was returning in Mr. Smith's car from the races at Aintree.

Mrs. Wint said there was no special hurry, and that neither she nor Mr. Smith had any intoxicants. The deputy-coroner, who said he had a statement by Mr. Smith that he thought he had run into a black cow, returned a verdict of "Death by misadventure" and said he had been in collision with somebody and was anxious to conceal his whereabouts on the road and whom he was with. There were no allegations, however, of such culpable driving as would amount to manslaughter.

HORSES SAVE MAN'S LIFE

MR. FREDERICK FORD, 64-year-old Suffolk magistrate and farmer, owes his life to two of his old farm horses.

Mr. Ford was lying seriously ill at his home at Copdock, near Ipswich. The horses had carried him home, unattended, after he collapsed on the back of one of them in his fields.

Along Main Road

The horses brought him across fields, through the village street, along the main London road with its three lines of traffic, and then, crossing the road down the lane to Mr. Ford's farmhouse, by the centuries-old parish church.

Mr. Ford was unable to move and delirious when he arrived there. "My husband had a terrible heart attack," Mrs. Ford told the "Daily Herald."

Off To Stable

"There is no doubt that my husband owes his life to them."

A villager said "I saw Mr. Ford slumped on the back of one of his chestnuts with the other leading the way. I wondered what was wrong when he did not speak, but I never guessed that he was so ill."

Mr. Ford is a justice of the peace (Ipswich Bench), and a member of the local education authority. He can remember nothing of his collapse and has no recollection of how he reached home.

King Leopold's Evil Genius Was A Pro-Nazi Hanger-On

FRESH evidence that King Leopold's capitulation was from the first a "put-up job" has been given me by a man who was on the spot at that time.

His name, for obvious reasons, cannot be given, but he was in a peculiarly good position to know what was going on in Belgium during the early days of the invasion.

In addition, he has known King Leopold himself well over a number of years, and he stresses the change of character that has taken place in him, writes a correspondent.

As a youth Leopold was studious, hard-working, zealous; but since the tragic death of his wife he has been a man living in moroseness, sometimes on the edge of tears, with extreme vacillation of character.

Sinister

His evil genius, this man confirms, was General Van Overstraten, whom he sent to see Mussolini before the capitulation.

"As a young soldier," I was told, "Van Overstraten was a hanger-on at the Court."

"He was a great man for social life; a clever man, but sinister, and most unpleasant."

"He was pro-German. There is little doubt that he was the devil in the box—and I think that if you follow the future career of General Van Overstraten and his wife in Belgium under German rule, you will find that they have plenty of money and power."

As further light on Belgium before the invasion, my informant pointed out that the Germans had 430 diplomatic passports for cars in Brussels alone.

Informed circles to-day envisaged a Monroe Doctrine for Europe dictated by the Axis following a statement by the official spokesman that the talks of Count Ciano in Berlin were concerned with military and political problems resulting from the war.

ALLEGED TEXT OF JAPANESE DEMANDS TO GT. BRITAIN

WHAT purports to be the text of the Japanese demands which were presented to Great Britain on June 28 came into the hands of the "Telegraph" this morning from a source which we believe to be reliable.

It is believed that the text will be released for publication in Tokyo and London within the next 48 hours.

The "Telegraph," whilst relying upon its source, cannot vouch for the accuracy of the text published below.

GOOD NEWS FOR OUR EVACUEES

Customs Concessions By Australian Govt.

OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT
MELBOURNE, July 10 (UP).

In response to the request of the "Hongkong Telegraph" for information regarding the Australian Government's ruling on the admissibility into the Commonwealth of evacuees' personal effects I made enquiries in Canberra, the capital, this morning.

I have been informed that Hongkong women and children who are being evacuated from Hongkong will be permitted to take bona fide personal effects into Australia without any limit being imposed regarding quantity or value.

Duty Free
These personal effects will be admitted duty free irrespective of whether they accompany the evacuee or are shipped separately from Hongkong by husbands of evacuees.

In the latter case, however, the Australian customs department will require satisfactory identification. This can be provided by the evacuee herself.

Gifts Not Included
It is emphasized that presents do not constitute personal effects and duty will be charged on any that are taken in.

Household effects and furniture will be admitted duty free to the total value of £100, irrespective of whether they accompany the evacuee or are sent separately in other ships.

But the Commonwealth will charge full duty on all household effects which have not been in the possession of the evacuee in Hongkong for twelve calendar months. Under no circumstances will new furniture be considered bona fide household effects and duty accordingly will be charged.

The maximum value of household effects permitted into Australia without duty being payable is £100 for each adult person. Children will not be permitted to declare household effects as their personal property.

The six Australian States have all announced that they are co-operating with the Commonwealth Government in arranging to render every possible assistance to the Hongkong evacuees when they arrive here.

COOLIDGE DUE TO-MORROW

The President, Coolidge is due to arrive in Hongkong at 7.30 a.m. to-morrow morning (Thursday), at the boom.

TRIAL MOBILISATION FOR AMBULANCE MEN

It is learned from a reliable source that preparations are being made to partially mobilise the St. John Ambulance Brigade.

The first relates to the Burma Road, the British military garrison at Shanghai, and Chinese currency.

The second section relates to Hongkong:

The alleged text of the first section demands:

1.—Complete closure of the Burma Road and Hongkong frontier;

2.—Withdrawal of the British garrison from the Shanghai area;

3.—Withdrawal of support for Chinese national currency.

Hongkong Demands
The section specifically relating to Hongkong is alleged to be as follows:

1.—Effective closure of the supply route to China via the Hongkong frontier, and Japanese inspectors to be stationed in Hongkong for the purpose of seeing that this provision is fulfilled;

2.—Deportation from the Colony of over 20 Chinese considered to be anti-Japanese and anti-Nanking;

3.—Effective suppression of anti-Japanese and anti-Nanking propaganda in Hongkong by newspapers and organisations. Relief bodies to be entirely divorced from politics;

4.—Closure of the branches of the four Chinese Government banks in Hongkong;

5.—Suspension of all communications, including aerial, between Hongkong and Free China.

Effect Of Capitulation
It will be recalled that demands of a similar nature have already been accepted by French Indo China, and Japanese inspectors are now stationed there for the purpose of watching the effect of the closure of the frontier.

The Japanese demands apparently aim at the complete isolation of Free China from the outside world, the only route not touched by the demands being the "back door" to Russia, which is beyond Japan's reach.

Closure of the Burma Road would not only prevent access of goods from other continents to China but would also prevent Chinese exports from going overseas.

NAVAL BATTLE REPORTED

SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"
GOTHENBURG, July 9 (UP).—Heavy gunfire has been heard throughout to-day from the direction of the Skagerak.

It is believed that an important naval engagement is in progress between British and German units.

A British plane was sighted over the Gothenburg archipelago.

Registration Problems Clarified

Several problems arising from the new regulations concerning registration of British subjects were clarified this afternoon by a Government spokesman.

Chinese women married to Britons or Chinese married to British women are excluded from the registration.

The offspring of such a union may or may not register, depending on whether the parents consider them of Chinese or European race.

Landlord's Concession Substantial Rent Reductions

The "Telegraph" learns that an owner of considerable property in Hongkong intends to meet the situation created by the evacuation of women and children by substantial rent reductions to tenants who remain alone in their homes.

It is believed that the reduction will be as much as fifty per cent. of the rent paid last month.

May Provide Lead
Reduction in rent will not apply to premises where several people have congregated together to form messes, etc.

It is considered possible that some other landlords will follow this voluntary lead, especially in view of the fact that many modern flats in Kowloon are now empty and are unable to find tenants.

GERMANIC UNION

Germany's Plan For Scandinavia

SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"
BERLIN, July 10 (UP).—Germany now considers the Scandinavian countries to be part of the "Germanic Union in the North Sea and Baltic."

The spokesman mentioned Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Aid For Children

NEW YORK, July 9 (Reuter).—Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President, has accepted the Honorary Chairmanship of the International Children's Refugee Committee which was formed in New York to-day to raise $5,000,000 to provide homes for refugee children.

Ultimatum To Turkey, Reported

Russia Seeks Control Of Dardanelles

SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"
ATHENS, July 10 (UP).—Unconfirmed reports from Istanbul state that Soviet Russia has handed Turkey an ultimatum demanding control of the Dardanelles.

The report cannot be confirmed in official quarters.

Simultaneously, it is reported from Riga that Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia are to be completely absorbed into the Soviet Union.

A referendum of the people will be held in the three Republics on Sunday and they will immediately afterwards be incorporated into the Union as Soviet Republics.

Short-Lived Independence
The three Baltic Republics were born of the Russian revolution. Estonia was proclaimed an independent Republic on February 24, 1918. It has a pact of Non-Aggression with Soviet Russia.

Latvia gained its independence on November 18, 1918. It has a pact of Non-Aggression with Soviet Russia. Lithuania's independence was proclaimed at Vilna on February 16, 1918. It had pacts of Non-Aggression with both Soviet Russia and Germany. Germany seized Memelland in 1919.

Soviet Demands On Iran
SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"
ISTANBUL, July 10 (Domel).—German and Italian sources report to-day that Russia has served demands on Iran.

Negotiations are now in progress between the two countries.

Soviet Pushing Into Balkans
SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"
ISTANBUL, July 9 (Domel).—The Soviet Union is expected to present some form of demands upon Turkey, according to German and Italian sources to-day.

These Soviet demands will presumably include the return of the former Russian territory which includes such cities as Erzurum, Kars and Ardahan, and the recognition of Soviet sovereignty over the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus.

These possible demands against Turkey, together with those against Iran, are understood to constitute the Soviet Union's first step in her southward push.

Taking advantage of the approach of German and Italian general onslaughts against the British Isles, the Soviet Union is attempting her drives into the Balkans and the Near East.

ITALIAN FLEET ROUTED IN BIG NAVAL FIGHT

SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"

THE FIRST NAVAL ENGAGEMENT OF THE WAR BETWEEN ITALIAN AND BRITISH BATTLESHIPS HAS ENDED IN THE ROUT OF AN ITALIAN SQUADRON IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

Only meagre reports of the engagement are to hand as yet, and the last reports indicated that the Italian Fleet was in flight, closely pursued by heavy British units.

Contact between the British and Italian battle fleets was made east of Malta.

Battleship Hit

Simultaneously with this, British squadrons stationed at Gibraltar and Alexandria, at either end of the Mediterranean, left their stations and are apparently converging on the central Mediterranean area.

The official report of the engagement east of Malta was made in an Admiralty announcement this morning. It said:

"Contact has been made with enemy forces east of Malta. The Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Fleet announces that one of the British battleships obtained a direct hit on an Italian battleship."

Italians In Flight
"The enemy is now being pursued." "The British squadron which departed from Gibraltar was attacked at sea by enemy bombers as it was carrying out a sweep towards the central Mediterranean."

The Officer Commanding this force reports that four of the enemy aircraft were destroyed and seven others damaged.

Italian Report
LONDON, July 10 (Reuter).—The Rome correspondent of the Stefani Agency states that Italian naval forces yesterday encountered British naval units while returning from escorting an Italian convoy to a port in Cyrenaica.

The battle began at 2.30 p.m. and raged until 9 p.m., and numerous bombing formations in successive waves attacked enemy ships with heavy calibre bombs.

Flow At 500 Feet
One officer decorated succeeded in making a detailed reconnaissance of an objective from 500 feet, enabling him subsequently to bomb the most vital part of the target accurately and with devastating results.

Another officer led the first leaded raid over Germany at the beginning of the war and since has been a splendid example of courage and determination.

A sergeant is decorated for locating and bombing a railway siding and trucks with 12 250-pound bombs from 600 feet. From the violent explosion that followed it was evident that the ammunition train was destroyed.

Ile De France At Singapore?

SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"
BERLIN, July 10 (UP).

A Tokyo despatch claims that the 43,500-ton French trans-Atlantic liner Ile de France is being held in Singapore by the British authorities.

The Ile de France has accommodation for 1,500 passengers.

Since the outbreak of the war she was in New York Harbour, but about ten weeks ago left there for an unknown destination, heavily laden with cargo.

Chinese Report Of Battle Not True

The report in the Chungking "Hsin Shu Pao" to the effect that British and French warships clashed at Kwangchowwan on Sunday is believed to be without foundation.

An official denial is expected to be issued later to-day.

Relations between the British and French naval authorities in the Far East are believed to be completely harmonious.

Although no direct or official information is available, it is believed, on the basis of reports from travellers, that the French Indo-China authorities have decided to work in conjunction with Britain in the prosecution of the war.

It will be recalled that the Petain Government recently recalled the military governor of Indo China and replaced him with Vice-Admiral Decoux, Commander-in-Chief of the French Squadron. Whether Vice-Admiral Decoux has assumed his new post is not known.

Shipping and air lines are now functioning normally between Hongkong and French Indo-China ports.

Air France service between Hongkong, Indo-China and Iran has resumed, and Imperial Airways have resumed between Hongkong and Bangkok, via Indo-China.

These facts would seem to indicate that the situation is entirely normal.

PETAIN PROMISES PURGE

Daladier & Reynaud
In Danger

SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH"
ZURICH, July 9 (UP).—France's democratic Parliament to-day voted itself out of existence in favour of a totalitarian dictatorship, with Marshal Petain as Fuehrer.

Petain's first act may be to institute a purge, involving criminal charges against M. Daladier and M. Reynaud, both of whom are in custody.

Both Chambers rushed through the rubber-stamp legislation dissolving Parliament.

Laval Prominent
M. Laval figures prominently in the new dictatorship.

He issued a warning to-day saying that any wavering by the French people would mean forfeiting the "honourable peace" with Germany.

Naval Yard Chargeman In Court

False Pretences Charge Upheld

George Percy Clarke, charge-man of the Royal Naval Yard, was charged before Mr. H. G. Sheldon, K.C., at the Central Magistracy this morning with obtaining $25 from Lam Wah-ching, married woman, by pretending that he was in a position to obtain an apprenticeship for Lam's son in the Yard on February 15. Clarke pleaded not guilty.

Lam said she had known Clarke for over a year, and had asked him to get a job for her son in the Yard, to which he agreed and advised her son to become an electrician. Two days later, Clarke asked her for $25 which was to be "Cushaw" for a certain Chinese in the Yard, saying that if he failed to secure the job, the money would be refunded. Mr. Yung, amah employed by Lam, stated that she saw her mistress hand $25 to Clarke.

Defendant's Evidence
In evidence, Clarke said he was acquainted with Lam, and she asked him to get an apprenticeship in the Yard for her son. He asked her for $25 and a receipt was given to Lam. After he had learned that the Yard was not taking apprentices, he brought a No. 1 Chinese to Lam's residence and explained the situation to her. Clarke said he wanted to return the money to Lam, and added that he had asked Lam to send her son to school to learn English, thus helping him more eligible for an apprenticeship next year.

Clarke was convicted and was remanded until to-morrow to see whether he could pay the $25.

PETAIN PURGE

Senator voted against the dictatorship. Their fate is unknown. The French reports from Vichy, the French capital, state that Laval is heading the group which is insisting on the punishment of M. Daladier, Mr. Reynaud and General Gamelin. For the declaration and continuation of the war.

More Formality.—The French Chamber of Deputies approved Marshal Petain's new Fascist Constitution to-day by 325 votes to three, showing that the whole business was just a mere formality. The Bill will go to the Senate to-morrow and will be presented to the two Houses together, sitting as a National Assembly. The same easy passage is expected.

Under the new constitution, dictatorial terms will be given Marshal Petain. To-day's meeting was important as by it the Chamber of Deputies signed only three shows that dictatorship is already at work in France. The meeting marked the end of long centuries of the freedom of France.

Senate Approves
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Following the action of the Chamber, the French Senate adopted by 225 votes the resolution proposing the revision of the Constitution, states a Bern dispatch to the official German news agency.

Fate Of Prisoners
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—While all French prisoners held by the Axis Powers will remain in captivity, all persons of whatever nationality who are held in Germany in France for acts favourable to Germany will be released. The French Armistice delegation has accepted this order.

Nazi Monroe Doctrine

Rome, July 9.
—Informed circles to-day envisaged a Monroe Doctrine for Europe direct-ly by the Axis following a statement by the official spokesman that the talks of Count Ciano in Berlin were concerned with military and political problems resulting from the war.

The Axis has shown itself not only a military but a political instrument, declared. "After the forthcoming final victory the Axis feels that it has a responsibility of a European character."—United Press.

Police Reservists—Appeal To Employers

To The Editor.
The "Hongkong Telegraph."

Sir,—I shall be much obliged if you will kindly allow me to draw the attention of all employers concerned to revised arrangements for duties of Police Reservists. As from Thursday July 11, members of the Reserve have been detailed for six hours duty daily—a tour of three hours between 7 a.m. and noon, and a tour of three hours between 6 p.m. and midnight. It is hoped that this arrangement will enable Reservists to continue in their civil employment.

I would request the sympathetic co-operation of employers to enable Reservists to carry out their orders.
T. H. KNOX.
Commissioner of Police.

The Rent Problem

Sir,—I wish to express my views on a subject in which I feel sure that many residents of Hongkong are very much concerned. First I would like to make it clear that this letter is not written with any spirit of criticism of the Government, who have hardly had time to deal with the question of leases and other forms of agreement between landlord and tenant, but to ensure that my reasoning on this matter will be brought promptly to the attention of all to whom the public look for justice. For reasons which will be obvious, I must use a "nom de plume" and cannot give precise details of my own case.

Immediately on being introduced as a prospective tenant, the rental of the accommodation I now occupy was increased from a very high figure to a very excessive one, which force of circumstances compelled me to accept.

I was then called upon to place my signature to certain terms which included one to the effect that I would give one calendar month's notice of my quitting the premises. My landlord has intimated that he is not yet prepared to discuss the matter of a reduction in rent and that any consequent decision on quit must be covered by one month's notice commencing the 1st day of the month at the end of which I intend to quit. The obvious intention of the landlord is to squeeze the exorbitant rental from the tenant for July and August at least, or possibly on the 31st of July to make a small unacceptable deduction in rental in the hope that the tenant would be too late to tender a written notice to quit at the end of August under the one-sided agreement (the landlord himself signed nothing).

In the first place the landlord was (and still is) profiteering through war which resulted in an influx of refugees. The Government's recent action (which undoubtedly is very wise) has created special circumstances (resulting from war) in which the tenant should be relieved of his obligation of regards notice to the landlord. Emergency regulations enforced to meet war continue to exist, and the law should now be revised to meet the emergency situation created by Government itself whereby men with families are left, I believe, with legal obligations to their landlords which are inequitable in view of tenants' obligations to their families who must be provided with homes elsewhere. The tenant now has full justification for appealing for emergency regulations to release him from agreements which may hold good in normal times. I suggest 75 per cent. of June rental, July and one week's notice to quit provided emergency regulations are passed and announced by the 24th July.

Whilst on this subject I would like to point out that a landlord netting a return of, say five per cent. per annum on a $105 house a few years ago would be making ten times that profit on the same house now. Food Control regulations rightly present increases in profit on food-stuffs, so the landlords have had a deal. Both houses and food are essential and I hope Government will do something to put things on a more equitable basis.

War Potentialities Of U.S. Revealed

NEW YORK, July 9 (Reuter).—“We are determined that no European nation shall ever invade our shores,” declared Mr. Louis Johnson, assistant Secretary of War when broadcasting over the Columbia system to-night. Given time, America's unmatched industrial facilities could be converted into a military defence such as the world has never beheld, he declared. The United States productive capacity for planes to-day was 14,000 a year, from to-day they hoped to make 25,000 or more a year. To-day the regular army was 240,000, but a year from now it will be 375,000 plus the National Guard.

The Post Office has not yet arranged any standard address through which letters can be sent to evacuees in Manila. “I do not know whether it is intended by the Government to arrange such a standard address later,” said the Postmaster General (Mr. Forrest) to-day. “But I think the address I suggested the other day will be found adequate.” This address was: Mrs. General Post Office, Manila.

ROOSEVELT AND THIRD TERM

WASHINGTON, July 9 (Reuter).—President Roosevelt at a Press conference to-day parried all questions designed to draw out his views on whether he should stand for a third term as President. Several hours earlier, Representative Sabath had stated after a talk with the President that President Roosevelt was not a candidate for a third term, but that he could not refuse the “nomination that would be given him.”

Britain The "Enemy"

Nazi Germany regards the British Empire as her greatest enemy, and at the heart of that enemy she will strike with every means at her command.

Attempts may be made at invasion by sea passage. But no experience in the present war have gone to show that powerful warships can be driven off the sea. The only air attack; the U-boat is far from being a decisive factor in naval operations; and the Germans have no fleet in being that could challenge the sea power of Britain, let alone the combined strength of the Allied fleets. In face of this Germany could not land forces of adequate strength on the British coast, although this hazardous adventure may be attempted. The more hopeful plan would be infiltration in small craft to disorganize Britain's war effort. But the invasion of the British Isles by air, to the greatest possible extent, has now been brought within the range of practical operations. With this there would be combined the intensive bombing attack, for which this country has long been prepared.

The Germans would rely on a combination of Fifth Column activities, parachute troops and troop-carrying aircraft. As regards the Fifth Column, the British Government, among other precautions, has rounded up all aliens, whether suspect or not, and Nazi sympathizers who they may be. In view of the deadly Fifth Column work in Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium, and France, and Nazi activities in every surviving neutral country within range, it would be criminal to run the risk of what a diabolically cunning secret enemy could do, with his plans for sabotage already laid, and with hidden weapons to his hand.

The Germans are singularly good at exploiting the ideas of others—the tank, for example, was a British invention—and a foreigner later authorities were so impressed by the mass parachute descents and troop-carrying aircraft at the Soviet manoeuvres of 1935 that they adopted this technique.

German parachute troops are organized in battalions that are carefully trained in their specialized duties.

Officially their uniform is the German Air Force blue-grey but the men may be disguised—not infrequently in the uniform of the country attacked. A steel helmet like the motorist's crash-helmet, respirator, hand grenades, a gun firing 500 rounds a minute, and perhaps a collapsible bicycle, are their essential equipment.

Company equipment, dropped in special containers with self-opening parachutes after the men had landed, includes ammunition and rifles, field glasses, compasses, spades, smoke candles and wire.

The battalion auxiliary weapons are the 3-inch mountain gun, medium and light mortars, heavy and light machine guns and machine gun pistols.

Parachute attack is preceded if possible by air reconnaissance. When the parachute descends 50 feet from their slow-moving planes, it is supposed to be possible for a company to land within an area of about 220 yards by 440, and assemble within a quarter of an hour.

Their functions are to seize aerodromes, power stations, railway junctions and telephone exchanges, and either make these useless or hold them until reinforcements arrive, possibly in answer to their signals. To these activities are added the creation of panic and spread-

CHINESE AIR FORCE

As the Sino-Japanese hostilities enter their fourth year, the public may be interested to know the part played by the Chinese air force.

It is generally admitted that numerically the Japanese air force is overwhelmingly superior to ours.

To a neutral observer it is nothing short of a miracle that we have been able to fight at all successfully in the air against such colossal odds for the past three years and continue to fight with vigour.

THE Chinese air force is of recent creation, dating back hardly half a dozen years.

It was only in 1934 that the squadrons attached to the provincial armies were brought to the fold of the Central Government and placed under one command. Under the able leadership of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek the various flying units were systematically organized, rigid training of personnel was started and above all courage and a strong sense of duty were inspired into every one in the force.

So what we lack in personnel and equipment is made up by the skill, superb morale of our officers which have found expression in numerous engagements with the enemy.

The air warfare in the present Sino-Japanese hostilities may be divided into four phases. The first phase covers the period from the commencement of the Shanghai battle to the fall of Nanking, the second from the fall of Nanking to the battle of Tientsin, the third from the fall of Tientsin to the fall of the Wu-Han cities and the fourth from the fall of the Wu-Han cities to the present.

The First Phase
At the very beginning of the hostilities Japanese military leaders were under the delusion that they could wipe out the Chinese air force in a few weeks.

As soon as the war broke out the Japanese high command sent bombing squadrons from their bases at Formosa and Quelpart Island to attack our air bases at Hangchow, Nanchang and Hankow. In these expeditions the enemy soon found that they had greatly underestimated the strength of their opponent. Japan's first attempt at bombing our air base resulted in a stunning blow at Hangchow where eight of her thirteen heavy bombers were shot down on August 14, 1937, the day following the outbreak of the Shanghai hostilities.

A bombing expedition to Nanking on August 15 forced no better. Of the 20 bombers that started from Formosa ten failed to return to their base. On that day hostile bombers were also brought down by us at other places, and the total of the day's "bag" was over 30 heavy bombers. In three weeks both the Kishu and the Kanoya Air Corps, each consisting of about 60 heavy bombers, were practically wiped out by us. The enemy relaxed in September and for three weeks Nanking was free from air raids. Instead of day-bombing they resorted to night raids, and their bombers did not appear in broad daylight without a strong escort of pursuers.

Our first bombing expeditions were sent out on August 14 to attack the hostile warships in the Yangtze Estuary and the Hangchow Bay and at the same time to bomb enemy trenches and military depots at Shanghai. On that day hostile bombers were carried out on the night of September 18 when the Kunda Cotton Mill in which the headquarters of the Japanese troops were housed was bombed. As a result, the enemy sustained material losses as well as heavy casualties in personnel.

In the course of the Shanghai fighting the enemy, finding it difficult to make any advance on the Shanghai front, turned their attention to the northern theatre of war where their forces were greatly strengthened in September in the hope of taking Tientsin to recoup for the losses at Shanghai. To meet the requirements of our ground troops on the northern front, we despatched a number of squadrons to Shansi, where our pursuits fought successfully with the enemy's force at Hankow, Yanglinggao and Aiyuan.

Our bombers made several attacks on the enemy positions at Tating and false news.

The German military junkers 89 and the Junkers 90 can carry 40 fully equipped men at a cruising speed of 200 miles an hour. It was the landing of thousands of men in troop-carrying planes, and not the parachute, that became a decisive factor in Holland. But it remains to be seen whether these unwieldy machines can penetrate the highly organized British anti-aircraft defences in anything like effective numbers.

As a result, 33 naval vessels in the Yangtze were sunk, and 100 others damaged and a great number of airplanes destroyed on the ground. A series of air combats were fought at Manchu, Hsinchow, Yangyang, Kuning and Hainyang in each of which losses were inflicted on the enemy.

In one of the raids on Nanyang in June, a squadron of six hostile heavy bombers were shot down by us and in August eight enemy planes were destroyed when they attempted to bomb the southern section of the Canton-Hankow Railway. In September and October and troop trains on the northern section of the Peiping-Hankow Railway. A part of our air force was stationed at Canton to patrol the southern sea coast, where we sunk three enemy naval craft by aerial attack. These activities on the part of the Chinese air force marked the first phase of the air war.

The Second Phase

AFTER the fall of Nanking the scene of hostilities gradually shifted to the southern section of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and the enemy advanced on Hangchow from North and South. The greater air base facilities as the result of occupation of the airfields, on the sea coast, the strength of the Japanese air force operating in this country was greatly increased.

But in spite of the enemy's overwhelming superiority, we hold our own and occasionally inflict losses on them by surprise attacks, as in the case of our bombing expedition to Formosa in February, 1938, which took the enemy unawares.

During this period we carried out, besides our "good-will mission" to Japan in May, bombing expeditions to the following places: Nanking, Wuhu, Kwangchow, Chongchow, Hainyang and Pengpu, at each of which places Japanese air fields were bombed. The enemy's warships at Tientsin, Lukong, Kwelich and Tungling in the Yangtze and aircraft carriers in Canton waters were subject to repeated air attacks. We also assailed enemy troop positions, artillery emplacements, railway stations and bridges and troop trains at fourteen different places in Anwei, Shansi and Honan. Our air force also took part in the battle of Tientsin.

As for the operations of our pursuits, in January, 1938, we brought down three heavy bombers at Nanchang. At Nanking, our airmen in a combat with the enemy on February 18, shot down eleven raiders. Our pursuits patrolling the southern section of the Canton-Hankow Railway encountered enemy planes near Canton on April 13, 1938, and brought down eight of their 18 pursuers that constituted the escort of a bombing squadron.

APRIL 29, the birthday of the Japanese Emperor, by the irony of fate, has also become a red-letter day in the calendar of the Chinese air force.

In 1938 the enemy celebrated the Emperor's birthday by sending a large number of planes to attack Hankow. These heavy bombers, escorted by pursuers, made their appearance above the Wuhan cities early that afternoon.

After an engagement of more than an hour with the raiders we "bagged" a total of 21 planes—11 pursuers and 10 heavy bombers. This was confirmed by the discovery of the wrecks on the spot.

It is, however, believed that the enemy's losses were much heavier. According to a Shanghai press report, 35 of the planes failed to return to their base. In this engagement our losses were four planes destroyed and three men wounded.

On May 31, 1938, the Japanese made another attempt to attack Hankow from the air with a fleet of 60 planes: 30 pursuers and 30 heavy bombers. They were met by our pursuits and after an hour's engagement, 13 hostile planes lay wrecked at different places in the neighbourhood of the Wu-Han cities. We lost three planes with one man killed and one wounded.

Other air combats during this period included two engagements above Kwelich, on March 25 and April 10, and those above Loyang and Changsha.

The Third Phase
AFTER the fall of Hankow the enemy advanced on Nanking by land and water.

In June, 1938, they captured Anking and a fortnight later the forts at Matsung fell into their hands. The enemy made Nanking and Wuhu their principal air bases, from which squadrons of heavy bombers were daily sent out to bombard Hankow, Nanchang and Hengyang.

Our air force was equally active. Every day we despatched bombing squadrons to attack the enemy warships and transports in the Yangtze and their lines of communications in the rear. Raids on the enemy's air bases at Nanking, Wuhu and Anking were occasionally made.

As a result, 33 naval vessels in the Yangtze were sunk, and 100 others damaged and a great number of airplanes destroyed on the ground. A series of air combats were fought at Manchu, Hsinchow, Yangyang, Kuning and Hainyang in each of which losses were inflicted on the enemy.

In one of the raids on Nanyang in June, a squadron of six hostile heavy bombers were shot down by us and in August eight enemy planes were destroyed when they attempted to bomb the southern section of the Canton-Hankow Railway. In September and October our bombers were busy with ground strafing and bombing of enemy artillery emplacements at Yangshing, Lushan and Hainyang.

The Fourth Phase
DURING 1939 our air force, like our army, was greatly strengthened and a new strategy and new tactics were accordingly adopted.

In both our offensive and defensive moves, better results were achieved. With regard to the activities of our bombers, expeditions were sent to Yunching, the enemy advance air base in the northern theatre of war, on February 5 and April 2, and 25. On October 3 and 14 we attacked the Hankow airbase, the chief Japanese air base in Central China. On the latter two occasions, we destroyed more than 80 planes on the ground in addition to shooting down several pursuers in the air. The other losses sustained by the Japanese included over 50 military trucks, 84,000 gallons of gasoline, and some ammunition dumps.

Our pursuits also gave a good account of themselves in a number of combats with air raiders. In the engagements with hostile planes at Lanchow on February 20 and 21, fifteen heavy bombers of Type No. 97 and Flat BR-20 were brought down and 63 airmen were killed.

Among the crew killed were one squadron leader and two others holding the rank of captain. The material losses sustained by the Japanese were estimated at U.S.$10,000,000. On April 22, two Japanese pursuits of Type No. 97 were shot down at Nanchang (Hanchung) and on May 3 seven heavy bombers of Type No. 98 were destroyed at Chungking.

On November 4 our pursuits attacked a fleet of 54 hostile heavy bombers above Chengtu. It was believed that at least five of the air raiders were brought down but so far the wrecks of only three have been discovered. Among the 18 dead who formed the crews of the ill-starred bombers, were a Japanese Navy Captain, a Japanese Naval Captain who was supposed to be a Japanese air ace, one squadron leader and another Japanese air officer holding the rank of Captain. The losses inflicted on the enemy were heavy as these killed represented the cream of the Japanese air force.

IN this connection it may also be mentioned that on February 2, 1939, we brought down a Japanese heavy bomber, a Flat BR-20, at Shayang.

Among the crew of six persons there was one Watanabe, Chief Armourer of the Japanese Air Force Headquarters, holding the rank of Naval Captain and one Lieutenant Commander Fujida, who had established a world distance record of close circuit.

The close of 1939 was marked by a series of air raids on Lanchow. As a result of combats on December 20, 27 and 28 we brought down ten heavy bombers. We celebrated the New Year of 1940 with a number of successful air raids on Japanese trenches, troop concentrations, motor transport columns and ammunition dumps at Nanning and its vicinity. Our attack on the Nanning airbase, the enemy's main base in the south, was successful in the destruction of eleven enemy planes on the ground, and our pursuits brought down one Japanese heavy bomber and ten pursuers in a series of encounters at Kwelich, Luchow and Kunglungwan. On New Year's Day of 1940 one of the latest Japanese observation planes was brought down at Linling. The enemy's air raids on Mengtze on February 1, 3, 13 and 17 resulted in the loss of three heavy bombers of Type No. 98 which were brought down by our pursuits. In the past two months our bombers were also active. The notable expedition they carried out were the attack of the enemy air base at Yuncheng on April 3, and on the enemy military depots, field headquarters, motor transport columns, and advance air fields at Yangyang, Hainyang and Chungshing and enemy naval crafts in the Tungling Lake.

Our pursuits also gave a good account of themselves in a number of combats with air raiders. In the engagements with hostile planes at Lanchow on February 20 and 21, fifteen heavy bombers of Type No. 97 and Flat BR-20 were brought down and 63 airmen were killed.

Among the crew killed were one squadron leader and two others holding the rank of captain. The material losses sustained by the Japanese were estimated at U.S.$10,000,000. On April 22, two Japanese pursuits of Type No. 97 were shot down at Nanchang (Hanchung) and on May 3 seven heavy bombers of Type No. 98 were destroyed at Chungking.

On November 4 our pursuits attacked a fleet of 54 hostile heavy bombers above Chengtu. It was believed that at least five of the air raiders were brought down but so far the wrecks of only three have been discovered. Among the 18 dead who formed the crews of the ill-starred bombers, were a Japanese Navy Captain, a Japanese Naval Captain who was supposed to be a Japanese air ace, one squadron leader and another Japanese air officer holding the rank of Captain. The losses inflicted on the enemy were heavy as these killed represented the cream of the Japanese air force.

IN this connection it may also be mentioned that on February 2, 1939, we brought down a Japanese heavy bomber, a Flat BR-20, at Shayang.

Among the crew of six persons there was one Watanabe, Chief Armourer of the Japanese Air Force Headquarters, holding the rank of Naval Captain and one Lieutenant Commander Fujida, who had established a world distance record of close circuit.

The close of 1939 was marked by a series of air raids on Lanchow. As a result of combats on December 20, 27 and 28 we brought down ten heavy bombers. We celebrated the New Year of 1940 with a number of successful air raids on Japanese trenches, troop concentrations, motor transport columns and ammunition dumps at Nanning and its vicinity. Our attack on the Nanning airbase, the enemy's main base in the south, was successful in the destruction of eleven enemy planes on the ground, and our pursuits brought down one Japanese heavy bomber and ten pursuers in a series of encounters at Kwelich, Luchow and Kunglungwan. On New Year's Day of 1940 one of the latest Japanese observation planes was brought down at Linling. The enemy's air raids on Mengtze on February 1, 3, 13 and 17 resulted in the loss of three heavy bombers of Type No. 98 which were brought down by our pursuits. In the past two months our bombers were also active. The notable expedition they carried out were the attack of the enemy air base at Yuncheng on April 3, and on the enemy military depots, field headquarters, motor transport columns, and advance air fields at Yangyang, Hainyang and Chungshing and enemy naval crafts in the Tungling Lake.

Our air force was equally active. Every day we despatched bombing squadrons to attack the enemy warships and transports in the Yangtze and their lines of communications in the rear. Raids on the enemy's air bases at Nanking, Wuhu and Anking were occasionally made.

As a result, 33 naval vessels in the Yangtze were sunk, and 100 others damaged and a great number of airplanes destroyed on the ground. A series of air combats were fought at Manchu, Hsinchow, Yangyang, Kuning and Hainyang in each of which losses were inflicted on the enemy.

In one of the raids on Nanyang in June, a squadron of six hostile heavy bombers were shot down by us and in August eight enemy planes were destroyed when they attempted to bomb the southern section of the Canton-Hankow Railway. In September and October our bombers were busy with ground strafing and bombing of enemy artillery emplacements at Yangshing, Lushan and Hainyang.

The Fourth Phase
DURING 1939 our air force, like our army, was greatly strengthened and a new strategy and new tactics were accordingly adopted.

In both our offensive and defensive moves, better results were achieved. With regard to the activities of our bombers, expeditions were sent to Yunching, the enemy advance air base in the northern theatre of war, on February 5 and April 2, and 25. On October 3 and 14 we attacked the Hankow airbase, the chief Japanese air base in Central China. On the latter two occasions, we destroyed more than 80 planes on the ground in addition to shooting down several pursuers in the air. The other losses sustained by the Japanese included over 50 military trucks, 84,000 gallons of gasoline, and some ammunition dumps.

Our pursuits also gave a good account of themselves in a number of combats with air raiders. In the engagements with hostile planes at Lanchow on February 20 and 21, fifteen heavy bombers of Type No. 97 and Flat BR-20 were brought down and 63 airmen were killed.

FURTHER R. A. F. ACTIVITY

Daylight Attacks On Nazi Concentrations

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—An Air Ministry communiqué states:

"Yesterday R.A.F. bombers made daylight attacks on concentrations of enemy troops on Dutch canals at Zwille, Haten and West, and at near Elbers and Deelt. Many of the barges were sunk, wrecked or set on fire."

"Other aircraft bombed an enemy supply ship in the Danish harbour, of Salborg."

"Our bombers also attacked aerodromes in enemy occupied territory, at Solsons and Douai. Aircraft, personnel and transport were damaged."

Patrol Ships Bombed
"Aircraft of the Coastal Command attacked and damaged enemy patrol vessels off the Danish coast. All our aircraft returned safely."

"Last night R.A.F. bombers attacked naval bases at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, where damage was done to dockyards and an enemy warship was set on fire."

"Further damage was done to oil refineries at Hamburg and a goods yard at Hamm."

"Aerodromes at Waalhaven, Amsterdam and Brussels were also bombed. One of our aircraft is missing."

Bergen Raided
"This morning a formation of our bombers attacked Bergen, where an ammunition dump was set on fire and damage was done to a ship and a seaplane slipway."

"Another formation of R.A.F. bombers attacked aircraft lined up on the Solva aerodrome at Stavanger. The attack was pressed home in the face of strong opposition from enemy fighters and ground defences. One enemy fighter was shot down."

"Seven of our aircraft failed to return."

Danish Coast Attacks
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Enemy shipping off the Danish coast was attacked by Coastal Command aircraft to-day, states the Air Ministry news service.

Two large minesweepers were trying to clear a part of the minefield when a patrolling Hudson bomber, the leading mine-sweeper. The explosion lifted the vessel's bows.

Another Hudson followed up a dive-bombing attack on an enemy supply ship with machine-gun fire and the ship was seen settling down by the stern.

Attack On Stavanger
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—The report of a bomber pilot who returned from an attack on Stavanger aerodrome is issued by the Air Ministry news service.

The report says: "Each of the three aircraft in my flight dropped its bombs but there was no opportunity to observe the result owing to the need to take and avoid enemy action."

"The port aircraft of my flight had most of its rudder blown away, presumably by anti-aircraft fire."

Attacked By 30
"On leaving the target, about 30 enemy aircraft were attacking us. My port aircraft was shot down in flames as was also the aircraft on the starboard side. The engine of my aircraft and oil tank were hit by cannon fire, the engine died and the aircraft dropped off."

"The attack by enemy aircraft lasted for over 30 minutes. I made a forced landing when the undercarriage jammed in an 'up' position. All the hydraulic system had been put out of action during the fight with the enemy."

"My air observer shot down one Messerschmitt and possibly damaged several others. The rear gunner damaged one Messerschmitt."

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Broadcasting to Americans to-night, Mr. Herbert Morrison, the Minister of Supply, said:

"Our confidence in our ability, not merely to hold off a Nazi attack, but ultimately to master it, is partly the measure of our confidence in America's readiness to add her great resources to our own for the destruction of that which menaces her no less surely."

"We Are Inspired"
"We are inspired by the sight of America awake and preparing."

"Against the material strength of the European continent organised for aggression, there is only one sure industrial counterforce, and that is to be founded on the capacity of Britain and the United States."

"You and we must dovetail our resources and our methods. We in Britain believe in our power to stave off and beat back the menace that hangs over us."

Mr. A. V. Alexander Dramatically Tells Of—

HOW THE FRENCH FLEET WAS DESTROYED

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Mr. A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, asked by private notice at question time to make a statement on the naval situation, was received with cheers as he rose in the House of Commons to say: "The House will remember that on July 4 the Prime Minister described the painful but very necessary action which had been taken the previous day to prevent units of the French fleet lying in British and north African ports from passing into enemy control."

"Since then the Royal Navy has carried out two further operations designed to increase the security of this country against the use of French warships by the enemy."

"On July 6, a French battle cruiser of the Dunkirk class which had been damaged and driven ashore at Oran was attacked by aircraft and the vessel was destroyed. The aircraft, which obtained six hits. As a result, this powerful ship was incapable of effective use for a very long time."

The Affair At Dakar
"Apart from ships thus dealt with, there lay at Dakar, in French West Africa, the 35,000-ton battleship Richelieu which had just been completed and was the most modern and formidable capital ship in the world, and was immediately available for active operations."

"In accordance with the decision announced to the House by the Prime Minister, His Majesty's Government decided that steps must also be taken to ensure that this vessel did not fall into enemy hands in a condition in which she could be used against us."

"A force was accordingly despatched to Dakar in order to present the French Admiral with three proposals similar to those offered to the French Commander at Oran. On July 7, a Flag-officer was entrusted with this operation, and he sent one of his captains ahead in a sloop in order to present the terms in person. On arrival this ship was informed by the French authorities that they would open fire if she approached close to port, and it was only after an interval that the French consented to receive this communication by signal."

Four Terms Offered
Mr. Alexander here recapitulated the alternatives offered to the Admiral at Dakar, which he thought desirable in view of the statements which were made by the French Government concerning the terms offered at Oran."

"These were four in number," continued Mr. Alexander. "No satisfactory reply was received within the necessary time limit, nevertheless, the British naval Flag Officer in charge waited longer before carrying out his orders to use force."

"Finally, as it became clear that the French authorities did not propose to accede to any of the British suggestions, he had no alternative but to carry out his painful duty in the early hours of July 8."

"The attack upon the Richelieu was two-fold."

Magnificent Skill
"A ship's boat under the command of Lieut. Commander R. E. I. Britton was sent into the harbour carrying depth charges. With great skill the boat successfully passed the boom defences and went alongside the port quarter of the Richelieu. At the right moment, the depth charges were dropped close under the stern of the warship, as she lay at anchor in shallow water, in order to damage her propeller and steering gear. The motorboat began to withdraw immediately after dropping the depth charges." (Laughter and cheers), "but while still in the harbour broke down

R. A. F. BOMB, SET ON FIRE NAZI WARSHIPS

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Further details of the daylight raids on German naval bases and dockyards by the R.A.F. bomber command early this morning show that two enemy warships, believed to be destroyers or light cruisers, were bombed and set on fire. The ships, which are in two groups of four, were seen at anchor at east Wilhelmshaven and though they were partially concealed by mist and protected by land and sea batteries the British aircraft succeeded in their attack."

At Kiel dock, sheds and slipways were damaged as well as a crane and jetty. One stick of bombs straddled the docks and started a fire which one pilot could still see after he had been on his homeward course for ten minutes."

An enemy supply ship was attacked near Aalborg in Denmark and was believed to have been hit by a salvo of heavy bombs, some of which also burst on the wharves in the harbour."

In the afternoon a series of raids caused considerable damage among the tightly packed barges seen on a canal some miles from Zwolle, at least four being directly hit after a low level attack, and two of them burst into flames."

Other barges were hit near Amsterdam, and at other points on Dutch canals groups of barges were bombed and wharves adjoining the basins were struck by high explosive."

"This is how matters stand at present. It is hoped that these conditions may continue."

ITALIAN THREATS

Gayda Still Riding The High Horse

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—The breakdown of the Franco-British Alliance can make no difference to Italian and German claims on France, declares the "Giornale d'Italia."

"The breakdown cannot modify the conditions that France created with regard to the Axis powers by her past policy and military action."

"The conquered nation remains as such with her political debts to Italy and Germany, and the changing of European policy cannot change the responsibilities of France, which will have to satisfy Italian and German demands," says the paper.

Gets Alibi Ready
Referring to Italian action against Britain, the "Giornale d'Italia" speaks of the "complex tasks of the Italian forces who will have to face British naval forces in the Mediterranean, the Red Sea, Indian Ocean and the Atlantic, while the air and land forces will have to combat the British on the frontiers of Libyan East Africa."

The official Stefani agency, in a Berlin dispatch, gives comments from the "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung" that France cannot evade responsibilities by adopting a form of government similar to her adversaries.

"The French experiment has come too late, for the European settlement will be undertaken solely by Italy and Germany," says the journal.

Axis Blockade Aims
LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—According to a German news agency dispatch to the "Giornale d'Italia," the various problems raised by the Axis aim "to pursue the war to final victory against Britain and its imperial forces" have been distributed among the two Axis Powers in complete agreement.

Each Power has been allotted its task, the object of which "is to close the blockade round England and cut it off from the imperial sources of supply and to meet and vanquish it on home and overseas territory as well as at sea."

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—Viscount Simon replied to criticisms regarding the evacuation of the Channel Islands in the House of Lords to-day.

Lord Simon said that "this lamentable and distressing event" was a totally isolated case due to the geographical position of the Islands close to the shores of France. It did not form any sort of precedent for any part of the United Kingdom."

Not To Be Repeated
The Government had no intention of abandoning any fortified position in any of the Dominions of the United Kingdom."

The Bailiffs of Jersey and Guernsey were continuing to carry on to the best of their power in the civil administration, for which they were responsible."

If, by withdrawing from the Islands the small garrison these people were freed from a terrible and continuous air bombardment, it would be a great compensation for the loss and distress they felt at the temporary separation from their homes."

"I trust the day is not far distant when we may have among our triumphs the supreme satisfaction of seeing that these good people are returned to their homes," said Lord Simon."

Around The Courses FRESH HAZARDS FOR GOLFERS

(By "Birdie")

SNAKES ARE BEGINNING to offer fresh hazards at the Country Club, Sheungshiu, and in the interests of golfers there I made a few enquiries from our nature expert about the reptiles. Rain, it seems, has driven them out of their holes and nests, and I can sympathise with the snakes to a certain extent in their apprehension over drowning. I paddled down the course last Sunday and only touched dry ground when I reached the greens.

Over twenty seven inches of rain fell during June and the few days of July to date. Twenty-five of those inches, I should say, are still just below the surface and the other two on top.

However, returning to snakes. Most golfers must, at one time or another, have come across these pleasant little companions, and, no doubt, have been instrumental in their destruction, for unless one really knows what one is dealing with it is best to be on the safe side.

At the Country Club there appears to be mainly two kinds—(1) a harmless rat and frog killer, and (2) a grass viper that is deadly. I killed one of each kind last Sunday with the intention of bringing them back for identification. I stored them snugly in one of the cups on the practice green and then forgot all about them. However, I expect and hope the green-keeper found them.

The first of these two snakes is a blackish-grey in colour on its back and sides, and is whitish underneath. This is the harmless one—or so I was told when I described it.

The second is a distinct dull green with a slender tapering head. Against the fairways they are fairly difficult to detect, and I doubt if they would be seen if they did not move. This, I am told, is the dangerous viper. It is comparatively small—I haven't seen one over 18 inches long—but is also comparatively brave.

The harmless fellow will glide away or try to, when footsteps approach; perhaps, unlike the viper, it knows it is without any offensive weapon. These grow to quite some size. I have seen one about four feet long.

But the little grass viper took several stabs at my driver before I knocked him out. Note the use of the driver—it is the longest club in the bag.

I don't know what trouble they have at the Royal Hongkong Golf Club with snakes, but at the Kowloon Golf Club the Country Club, Shek-O, they are rareties. Record "bag" at Sheungshiu last autumn was four in a day.

THE rain that drove the snakes out lies deep on the course. Casual water and plugged balls are a stroke by stroke occurrence. The 8th green is unplayable and has been for the past five weeks, while the 1st, 2nd and 3rd fairways are in valleys and retain enough water to keep an army several weeks in a desert.

A little more of this weather and I am afraid that all the grass on the course will be drowned—if it isn't already.

IN talking of snakes as fresh hazards out here, consider the new obstacles that litter the courses at home. To prevent enemy landings by aeroplane, trenches are being dug and have been dug across fairways, and other hazards in the shape of old tractors, rollers and lorries have been strawn about the approaches on long holes.

One golf club has gone so far as to plant unused railway sleepers upright for the whole length of holes of 300 yards or more. While yet another oddity is the placing of a strong wire across the fairway three feet above the ground. This, it is said, is sufficient to overturn any landing plane.

War-time golfers might find that these add further spice to the game—though I doubt if there is much time to spare for golf over there at the moment.

OTHER golf news from home is that Edinburgh University have retained the Scottish inter-University Women's golf championship by defeating St. Andrews 7 matches to 3, with one match halved.

This was played over the Eden course, St. Andrews.

The holders were successful in four of the forenoon singles, and won all four games in the afternoon.

Previously, Edinburgh defeated Glasgow 10-2, while St. Andrews beat the same University 11-1. Aberdeen did not enter a team.

Major Baseball

Nationals Humble Americans

NEW YORK, July 8 (UP).—The National Leagueers humbled the Americans 4-0 in the mid-summer Major Baseball classic to-day at St. Louis.

"Reuter" states that the scores were:

National	4	7	0
American	0	3	1

(Winning pitcher—Derringer)
Max West's home run in the fifth inning, bringing in two other batters, started the National League's run to victory. The other run was tallied in the eighth.

Tennis Star

Joins Royal Air Force

Murray DeLoof, one of our youngest and brightest lawn tennis stars, is the newest sporting recruit to the Royal Air Force. He has joined as an A/C 2, but hopes to get a commission in the near future.

DeLoof's entry into the ranks of the R.A.F. means that all but the first two and the last two of the official L.T.A. ranking list have now joined up.

It is said that a young player of such talent as DeLoof should have his career so rudely interrupted at such an important phase.

After winning the British Junior Championship at the age of 17, he quickly made his mark in senior tennis, and the following year recorded a creditable victory over C. Kirby. This year it seemed touch-and-go whether he would get a place in our Davis Cup team.

He was passed over, but, undaunted, went on to show what he could at Wimbledon by a fine win over D. Mitic, the Yugoslavian Davis Cup player—only to meet his Waterloo in the next round at the hands of F. Kukuljevic, also of Yugoslavia. As the Yugoslavian Davis Cup team won the European Zone final against Germany this was not such bad form.

succeeded the late Mr. H. Gullen as secretary. Mr. Gullen is well-known in many parts of the world, and has been R. and A. secretary for the past 20 years. As Britain's ambassador of golf he travelled extensively in charge of many international teams, and accompanied the Walker Cup teams to America.

That the British Amateur and Professional Championships have become among the most popular and esteemed competitions of the world has been credited to his organising ability.

His successor, however, has also had much experience in the organising of championships, and the future of the Club is confidently left in his capable hands.

O'WAY HAYES, amateur champion of South Africa, has, at the age of 21, followed in the footsteps of Bobby Locke and has turned professional.

COUNTY CRICKET London Counties Defeat Cheam And Guildford Surrey Beat Richmond

LONDON COUNTIES and two British Empire XIs featured in four of the five matches recently played at Home, Surrey, in the remaining game, beating Richmond by 30 runs. The latter game was marked by a lively innings of 55 by P. G. H. Fender.

Century For Hulme

LONDON COUNTIES, in a one-day match passed Cheam's total for the loss of 4 wickets, had for their top scorer Joe Hulme. The Middlesex cricketer reached his century in 80 minutes and got 7 sixes. Best strokes of Eastman were a six and 8 fours, while Farr hit 9 fours.

Cheam lost four men for 12 and then recovered as the result of good batting by Randall and Ryder, who got most of his runs by cutting and leg hitting. When tried a second time Duration took the last three wickets with 12 balls for 3 runs.

Mobilising Resources

India To Make Full War Effort

SIMLA, July 9 (Reuter).—Steps are taken to mobilise India's resources for an unparalleled military effort, declared the Senior Staff Officer of the Indian Army, broadcasting to-day on India's war efforts.

Previous planning, he added, in the production of Ordnance and supplementary supply had been brought to such a high level, that almost from the outset of the war India had provided not only the existing military forces with ample quantities of ammunition, light armament and equipment, but had also supplied enormous amounts of these items to Allied forces overseas.

Personnel Increase

Furthermore, a beginning was made in the production of numerous military requirements not previously manufactured in India, including armoured plating.

The personnel of the Royal Indian Army, although thousands had been sent overseas, the adequately equipped strength was now greater than at the outbreak of war apart from the recently-announced expansion, involving initial increases of 100,000 men and a 25-fold increase in the number of Indian officers compared with pre-war conditions.

British Aid For China

London Committee Starts New Fund

LONDON, July 9 (Reuter).—The Dean of Canterbury, speaking at the China Campaign Committee dinner in London, declared that Britain should give assistance to China even now.

"It would be for our own safety as well as for moral good to help the Chinese who are engaged in a struggle kindred to our own. "England should not give an inch to Japan in appeasement."

Russia's Assistance
The dinner was attended by the Chinese and Russian Ambassadors, and Dr. Quo Tai-chi, expressing gratification at the presence of Mr. Ivan Malsky, said it was something more symbolical than he might be ready to admit.

Acknowledging "the great contribution Russia has made for the continuance of China's struggle," Dr. Quo said: "She has given us great material assistance without any political conditions whatever."

Within five minutes of the appeal by the Dean of Canterbury for money for the China Campaign, £30 was contributed.

FRENCH PUPPETS START THEIR ACT

ROAD COLLAPSES BENEATH BUS

An unusual accident occurred in Bonham Road near the Netherlands Hospital yesterday evening, in which a bus driven by Lee Sum-hon, was involved.

Part of the road collapsed under the front left wheel of the bus, which fell into a hole four feet deep. The front left spring of the vehicle was broken.

There were no casualties.

MACAO'S LOSS: GOVERNOR DIES THIS MORNING

The Colony, and the Portuguese community in particular, will learn with regret of the death, which occurred this morning, of His Excellency Dr. Artur de Sousa Tamagnini Barbosa, Governor of Macao.

Dr. Barbosa, who had been unwell for some months, passed away at 7.25 a.m. Arrangements had been made for him to catch the next clipper from Macao, via Hongkong and the United States, for Portugal, his physicians having decided that a difficult operation should be performed at an early date.

At the time of his death, Dr. Barbosa was serving his third term as Governor of Macao. As the result of his long association with the Portuguese colony, he had become a commanding figure in Portuguese affairs in the Far East. To him also much credit is due for the fostering of the happy relations between Macao and Hongkong.

Dr. Barbosa had a long association with Hongkong. It was in 1918 that he passed through the Colony on his way to take up the post of Governor of Macao for the first time. A change of Government in Lisbon, early in 1919, unfortunately led to his recall. In that short tenure he had shown undeniable gifts as an administrator, and he returned later to fulfil his excellent promise.

When he reached Macao again in 1926, it was to find an impoverished colony, with a depleted exchequer, and anti-foreign feeling among the Chinese population. By his tact and frankness, he soon succeeded in gaining goodwill, including that of the authorities of the districts adjacent to Macao and of the Canton provincial government. A fast friendship between himself and many leading Chinese officials was the result. The kindness which he showed to Dr. Sun Yat-sen in the latter's second exile in 1918 was remembered.

During his term as Governor from 1926 to 1930, Dr. Barbosa visited Hongkong on several occasions and was always cordially received. Hongkong rejoiced when the Carnation Government in Lisbon chose him to carry out its programme for Macao in 1937.

Before his third appointment as Governor of Macao, Dr. Barbosa was made Director General in the Ministry for the Colonies in Lisbon, one of the highest appointments in the Portuguese Civil Service.

Dr. Barbosa was the son of a man who held high office in Portuguese colonies. His father, Senhor Artur Tamagnini de Abreu, Barbosa, for more than 30 years held high posts in the Government of Macao and later was in charge of Portuguese affairs in China, Japan and Siam. Dr. Barbosa spent his childhood in Macao but finished his education in Portugal, being a student at the University of Coimbra.

At the age of 59, Dr. Barbosa was reckoned to have many more years before him in Portuguese colonial administration, but in the last few months his health failed him. He suffered from arterio-sclerosis, complications setting in lately.

He was twice a widower and is survived by a married daughter and five sons. One of his sons, Master Antonio Tamagnini Barbosa, was with him at the time of his death this morning.

The sympathy of the Hongkong public will be extended to his children in their great bereavement.

Consul's Statement
No official news had yet been received by the acting Portuguese Consul General, Mr. F. P. de V. Soares, when informed of the death of Dr. Artur Tamagnini Barbosa, Governor of Macao, by a representative of the Hongkong Telegraph this morning.

Dr. Artur Tamagnini Barbosa

AIR SERVICE RESTARTS

Imperial Airways' service between Hongkong and Bangkok recommenced to-day when the Delphinus left Kai Tak airport with Captain M. Brunton and first officer L. Harvey at the controls this morning.

The plane will connect with the Australian air mail service. She carried 45 kilos of mail and 61.2 kilos of freight. Passengers on board were Mr. R. S. Macmillan for Bangkok, Mr. W. Lowy of the Kowloon Motor Bus Company, to Sydney, and Mr. White to Calcutta.

Australian and Malayan mails are expected to arrive by an inward Imperial plane this afternoon.

Mr. Soares said he had no comment to make except that the Portuguese community in Hongkong would deeply regret his death. "I expect the Portuguese community here will be sending a telegram to Macao expressing their sympathy when the news becomes known," the Consul added.

Church's Sorrow
The Roman Catholic churches in Hongkong have as yet made no arrangements for the holding of Requiem masses for the late Dr. Barbosa.

Rev. Fr. J. M. Spada, of the Catholic Cathedral, expressed his deep regret at hearing the news of Dr. Barbosa's death. "I expect the Portuguese community here will be sending a telegram to Macao expressing their sympathy when the news becomes known," the Consul added.

O.A.G.'s Telegram
The following telegram was despatched this morning from the Officer Administering the Government, the Hon. Mr. N. L. Smith to the British Consul in Macao:

"Please convey to the Government of Macao the deep sense of grief which this Colony feels in the death of Dr. Barbosa.
"To me personally the loss of a friend of many years' standing is a very real sorrow.

HSENGKING SEIZED

Ship In Shanghai

Shanghai, July 9.
The Japanese navy seized the China Navigation Company's steamer Hsengking on its arrival to-day from Tientsin, from where it had brought munitions for the Shanghai garrison. British naval authorities said they were investigating the seizure and denied the reports that the Japanese flagship Idzumo, which made the capture, had machine-gunned the vessel.—United Press.

They Wanted To Fight— Canadians Hid In Troopship

TWENTY-TWO Canadian soldiers who could not get to France quickly enough for their liking, stowed away in troopships which brought the second detachment of Canadians to England recently.

The men were part of the original contingent, but at the last moment lack of accommodation kept them out of the draft.

They were severely reprimanded, but in the circumstances have been absorbed into the unit and will be able to fight alongside their friends.

Thousands Waiting
Most of the newly arrived Canadians are from Toronto, but there are French-Canadians in large numbers, Polish-Canadians—and Sam Morgan, of Toronto, a negro.

Staff Sergeant John Edward Smith told the News Chronicle: "When I heard the King's speech I beat it to join up. I left a good job, a good wife and three kids for 6s. a day, but I don't regret it."

Smith has not seen his mother or father for 20 years. They live at Benson House, Hatfield, London.

Private E. J. O'Shea, a veteran of the last war, declared: "There are thousands more waiting to get over. Recruiting is unnecessary."

LATE NEWS

SHANGHAI, July 10 (Reuter).—Messrs. Butterfield and Swire have issued the following statement: "There appears to be some misunderstanding regarding the status of the ammunition on board the s.s. Hsengking. On July 6 a routine telegram was received from Tientsin advising that the Hsengking would leave for Shanghai on the evening of that day. The telegram included advice to us that the vessel had on board 704 packages of ammunition shipped by the French military forces at Tientsin."

"In accordance with the usual procedure this cargo is passed through the customs at Tientsin and is duly manifested by the vessel."

"The French authorities here are notified that shipments for them are en route."

"On arrival of the vessel a delivery order is issued to the French military forces here and the usual application to the customs for the release of the cargo is made by them."

"In this instance no departure whatsoever was made from this regular procedure."

"The transportation of military stores on behalf of the French authorities from Tientsin to Shanghai has been a regular part of our business in the past and all packages shipped by them confirm to the shipping procedure which refers to other cargo."

SAIGON, July 10 (Reuter).—The report from Thailand that the Emperor of Annam had been assassinated is declared to be quite untrue.
